Police make arrest in webcam killing

But cops say there's no evidence that man had been criminally stalking victim

Police charged a Toronto man with first-degree murder Wednesday in the death of 23-year-old York University student Qian Liu.

Brian Dickson, 29, is to appear in court Thursday in connection with the slaying of the Chinese student late last week.

News of the arrest came as a plane carrying Qian Liu's grieving parents touched down at Pearson International Airport.

Liu's body was discovered by two friends and her landlord at 27 Aldwinckle Heights on the morning of April 15 after they were alerted by Meng Xianchao, the victim's boyfriend in China, who said he witnessed part of the struggle between the woman and an intruder by webcam the night before.

The victim was found in a basement apartment naked from the waist down, police said, adding there were no obvious sign of trauma.

It was revealed that the victim originally lived at 46 Haynes Ave., before moving in January to the Aldwinckle location. The online friend's post said the suspect once lived with Liu, but police wouldn't confirm that, or explain why she moved so suddenly when she had only arrived in September.

Police interviewed a person of interest early in the investigation and released him.

However, police said they were checking out his alibi.

By press time, police had not confirmed whether the man they arrested is the same person whom they had interviewed before.

Student stabbed at Brampton school

One or possibly two suspects being sought: Police

A Grade 11 student was treated and released from hospital after he was stabbed several times during a hallway fight at a Brampton high school Wednesday.

Judith Nyman Secondary School went into lockdown just after the stabbing, which occurred around 10 a.m.

The lockdown was lifted about 90 minutes later after Peel police tactical officers determined none of the culprits was still on the scene.

Const. George Tudos said investigators aren't certain what was used to inflict the stab wounds.

"There was an altercation shortly before," Tudos said outside the high school, on Williams Parkway near Bramalea Road. "He suffered more than one wound."

Police found the injured student lying in a hallway.

"He was conscious and breathing," Tudos said.

Police don't know if the assailants attend the school or what their relationship is with the victim.

"We have some witnesses and we are looking for more," Tudos said.

Students said a teacher heard a commotion in the hallway. When the teacher went to investigate, she saw a boy bleeding profusely from his arm.

Police haven't released any descriptions of the suspects. It's also unknown if the weapon has been found. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

A la Cart vendor threatens to sue

Souvlaki seller wants compensation for some of the $89,000 she sank into the disastrous project aimed at providing healthy street food options

Red tape

A city-hired consultant concluded the initiative to get healthy ethnic food into a market dominated by hotdogs and fries was strangled by red tape and the deficiencies of the required cart.

- The committee voted to axe the program, waive vendors' location fees from 2010 to 2013, and strike a "working group" to explore better ways to expand the types of food all 140 Toronto street food vendors may offer.

An a la Cart street food vendor broke down and cried Wednesday while telling Toronto councillors: "I destroyed my family's finances with this project."

Kathy Bonivento noted that a city-hired ergonomist concluded it would take three people to safely move the hulking, malfunctioning $30,000 food carts she and the seven other participants had to buy.

"These carts don't even make enough money to pay one person, let alone three, so this renders our business unviable," she said, reacting to a staff recommendation to end the three-year program early, with remaining participants allowed to stay open with fewer rules.

"The vendors have a duty to their families to recover these funds," Bonivento said, taking a long pause as she choked back tears. "I've destroyed my family's finances with this project."

Coun. Cesar Palacio, who chairs the licensing committee that oversees hot dog vendors, said he is talking to staff about allowing a cluster of ethnic food carts at certain locations. Such "pods" have made Portland, Ore., a street food mecca.

The association representing hotdog vendors, which warned of a la Cart's failure from the start, told councillors it's unfair to waive location fees only for the program's remaining members.

Marianne Moroney urged them to allow all vendors to serve more foods, subject to health inspections, to allow more locations, and to expand the vendors' allowed street "footprint."

Council will have the final say at its May 17-18 meeting. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Peregrine falcon egg not expected to hatch

Hopes are not high for Harlequin.

To much fanfare and the delight of Harlequin Enterprises staff, a peregrine falcon egg was laid Tuesday on the barren, concrete ledge of a North York office tower.

But a local expert doesn't expect the speckled burnt orange egg to hatch.

The ledge is too exposed and the concrete too cold. Wind, water and the chill of the concrete are expected to draw too much heat from the egg, said Mark Nash of the Canadian Peregrine Foundation.

"It will freeze to death," Nash said.

Should any chicks hatch, the frail newborns are vulnerable to hypothermia.

the romance novel publishing company, whose offices have a front-row seat for the drama. CEO Donna Hayes plans to name the first chick Harlequin.

Nash, however, fears no chicks will hatch until the peregrine foundation can install a nesting tray on the ledge. They had hoped to do that Wednesday, but wet, windy weather delayed efforts.

The tray

- Nash said his group is working with building management on ways to get the tray on the ledge, such as dropping a volunteer down on a window washing chair or lifting someone up in a cherry picker. Luckily, the ledge is on the fifth floor.
- The tray, a simple wooden box containing pea gravel, is crucial to egg survival, Nash explained.

York University boosts its security

Move follows murder of one student, rape of another, next to campus

York University has boosted its campus security ranks and hired off-duty police officers to patrol overnight after the slaying last weekend of a student living in a private housing complex next to the Keele campus.

Toronto police have also "significantly increased" patrols — both undercover and uniformed officers on bikes — throughout the student subdivision, dubbed The Village, following the murder of Qian Liu, who came from China last fall to study English.

"The York community is mourning the loss of one of our students, Qian Liu," president Mamdouh Shoukri said in a statement yesterday. "At this difficult time there is a heightened level of concern among students about safety. Safety has been and remains a top priority at York University."

Safety has long been a concern at the sprawling suburban campus after the sexual assault in 2007 of two students in residence prompted a safety audit that culminated in a 62-page report last summer calling on everything from more security patrols and better lighting to more outreach into nearby neighbourhoods.

York's student federation will host a forum today to hear students' concerns over safety at Canada's third-largest university. In addition to the slaying, one female student was assaulted and a young woman was raped in an overgrown field near The Village in the past few weeks.

POLICE HANDOUT

▶ Qian Liu

Federation president Vanessa Hunt said York does not seem to take safety seriously enough, and called for compulsory diversity training for all students — the female student was attacked after identifying herself as a lesbian outside a campus pub — and compulsory safety training for all newcomers to Canada, like Liu.

"International students need more support and safety tips and that support needs to be mandatory. I know, I'm an international student," said Hunt, newly elected president of the York Federation of Students, who came to York in 2005 from St. Maarten.

Ajax teacher gets bail in Jamaica slashing

A 43-year-old Ajax teacher accused of slashing his wife's throat and leaving her for dead during their Caribbean vacation has been granted bail in Jamaica.

Paul Martin, who taught Grades 5 and 6 at St. Francis de Sales school in Ajax, is charged with attempted murder.

He is expected to be released next week on a surety of about $5,500 after being held in a Jamaican jail for nearly four months.

Jacqueline Samuels-Brown, Martin's lawyer, said her client will argue self-defence.

At the Tuesday bail hearing, Martin's lawyers submitted several sworn statements penned by members of the Ajax community that vouched for his character.

The statements "spoke to Mr. Martin's track record as a man devoted and committed to his family, in particular the children of the family," Samuels-Brown said.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

▶ Paul Martin is escorted by cops from the Falmouth Court house in Falmouth, Trelawny, on Dec. 28.

The conditions in jail have been "extremely taxing" and Martin has been treated in hospital for infections he contracted while in custody, his lawyer said. He has not seen his two small children since December.

"He's very distressed," Samuels-Brown said.

"One of the things he kept saying is 'I love my children so much I would do nothing that would prevent me from being able to see them,' And he (has) repeated this over and over."

Cathy-Lee Martin was attacked in mid-December during a vacation at a Montego Bay resort with her husband, who is the brother of former Liberal MP Keith Martin.

Appearing in a Jamaican court in late December with her neck heavily bandaged, she testified that her husband drove them to a secluded road after they checked out of their hotel, then slit her throat twice with a knife and choked her before leaving her for dead.

She testified that during the attack her husband accused her of having an affair — a claim she has denied. She said she jumped out of the car and was rescued by a passing motorist. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Big stars shine light on small kids choir

Sharon, Lois & Bram alum lauds St. Jamestown youth choir for its lessons in music and self-esteem

MARK HERBERT
TORONTO@METRONEWS.CA

Elephant Show alumni hope their inclusion in a small community music program will encourage others to lend their support.

Reaching Out Through Music (ROTM) is a program in its fourth year that provides musical opportunities to youth ages six-14 in the community of St. Jamestown.

Sharon Hampson of Sharon, Lois and Bram fame became involved with the program last year and said ROTM offers more than just music lessons.

"They learn a lot more than just singing," Hampson said with regards to ROTM choir members. "It's the building of self-esteem."

Aside from the choir, the program offers children the chance to learn to play piano, violin, guitar and recorder.

Hampson said the kids are proud to be a part of something and the choir especially makes them feel like a team.

"They learn that the whole is greater than the sum of the parts," Hampson said. "They learn that the end result is bigger than all of them."

The program is gearing up for its annual fundraising event April 30 at St. Simon's Church, which is what drew Hampson to the program last year.

"I was very impressed by the concert," Hampson said. "These kids would never have the opportunity to learn how to play an instrument."

ROTM director said it has been hard to find money for the program.

"If we don't get a grant, we'll have to look at something else," said Patricia Parr. "We're not ready to give up yet."

For more information, ROTM can be reached at 416-508-2705 or sales@reachingoutthroughmusic.org.

He helps dads regain right to be a parent

Fathers get a raw deal in Family Court, activist says Say he gives them hope and a path to their kids

KEITH CARMAN
FOR METRO

Deadbeat dad? Try deadlocked dad.

Family courts won't admit it but when it comes to parenting issues, fathers get the short end of the legal stick.

It's an issue Danny Guspie, executive director of Fathers' Resources International (FRI), has seen — and experienced personally — time and again.

His Toronto-based organization has been assisting divorced, separated and forcibly denied fathers see their children for almost two decades.

"We serve fathers because there's no other form of help for dad," he says, adding: "Men don't get a second chance in Family Court while women do.

"Many give up before they even start, believing they have no chance of fairness."

Guspie created FRI after facing custodial issues himself. He became a researcher, certified law clerk, coach, counsellor and activist.

Working with many of Ontario's senior family lawyers, FRI helps frustrated dads struggling to gain or maintain time with their kids.

More importantly, it helps men stand up for the right to be a parent.

Liberal leader tied with PM in popularity stakes

JONATHAN HAYWARD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Gaining popularity: Michael Ignatieff and wife Zsuzsanna Zsohar board their campaign plane in Toronto on Wednesday.

Nuts and bolts

- The trend: The survey suggests Michael Ignatieff has seen his popularity spike recently while Stephen Harper's has fallen.
- The figures: Ignatieff was viewed favourably by 42 per cent of respondents and negatively by 50 per cent. Harper was viewed favourably by 43 per cent and unfavourably by 52 per cent.
- The statistics: The poll of 1,000 Canadians, conducted between April 14 and April 17, is considered accurate to within 3.1 percentage points, 19 times out of 20.

Election 2011

A new poll suggests Michael Ignatieff has made significant gains in personal popularity and is now tied with Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

The Canadian Press Harris-Decima survey suggests the Liberal leader has regained the ratings he held in 2009.

However, Jack Layton, leader of the popularity contest, was viewed favourably by 68 per cent of respondents — and unfavourably by 26 per cent.

Strategic-vote fans have a strategy — social media

The strategic-vote advocates are at it again.

They're armed with social media and intriguing, interactive websites.

As is often the custom mid-way through election campaigns, some who cringe at the thought of the incumbent party winning are trying to pool votes to sway the results.

It has never worked on a large scale in Canada and its detractors warn that strategic voting could actually do more harm than good.

Nonetheless, the advocates say strategic voting can indeed work in some elections and their anti-Conservative campaigns are gaining momentum.

Project Democracy says it has registered 900,000 page views since it launched its website a week ago.

Gary Shaul's group, Catch 22, has raised $15,000 and is about to launch a low-key advertising and flyer campaign.

Europe boosts strikes in Libya

◗ Rebels want weapons for 'official army' ◗ EU foreign policy rep says rapid political transition is a must

Europe has moved closer to doing what it said it wouldn't do in Libya — directly jump into the bid to overthrow leader Moammar Gadhafi.

France said Wednesday it has already sent military officers to work with Libyan rebels on the ground, in addition to stepping up air strikes. Italy and Britain have said they're also sending military officers.

European officials portray their assistance as an effort to fill the military gap with Gadhafi's forces — and turn the tide without overstepping rules of the UN-sanctioned military operation to protect civilians. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Harper refuses to discuss Tory minority stance

Ignatieff says PM's response shows inability to play well with others Harper claims economy is at stake

Stephen Harper has used nearly every campaign speech to warn about what his opponents might do if he only gets a minority government — but don't ask what he might do.

The prime minister insists his opponents will bring him down on a confidence vote, ask the Governor General to give them power, and then proceed to wreck the economy.

But would he try working with other parties — including compromising on his budget — to get their support as he occasionally has in the past?

FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Stephen Harper

Harper's news conference Wednesday was dominated by such questions. He sidestepped each one, shrugging off queries about compromise and responding with his central message: Only a Harper majority government separates Canada from economic disaster.

"I don't accept the question," Harper replied to one reporter in Rivière-du-Loup, Que.

"The only way to avoid (a coalition) is to follow through our popular budget." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Texas ablaze

Firefighters optimistic with a 20 to 30 per cent chance of rain this week

Firefighters in Texas were battling several massive blazes across the state Wednesday, adding up to more than 400,000 hectares of land burned in a little more than a week in the drought-stricken state.

The fire started Friday in the Possum Kingdom Lake area, a community of mostly weekend homes about 115 kilometres west of Fort Worth. It spread into two other counties and was still raging well into Tuesday night.

That's when authorities ordered the 400 residents of Palo Pinto, about 80 kilometres west of Fort Worth, to leave because of the advancing flames, said Trooper Gary Rozzell of the Texas Department of Public Safety. The county's jail inmates also evacuated, as did the nearby community of Graford and the small town of Strawn, south of the lake.

Weary firefighters had some reason for hope as rain and higher humidity levels were forecast for the rest of the week in parts of the state. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ELISHA DACEY
@METRONEWS.CA

Bet Stephen Harper never thought a photo of himself in his university days would go viral.

Thanks to a new website, vintagevoter.ca, photos of Harper and the other national party leaders in their "glory" days are all over Twitter and Facebook.

The site, which has published photos of Harper, Elizabeth May, Michael Ignatieff, Jack Layton and Gilles Duceppe in their younger days, was created by Winnipegger David Liebl, 31, and two friends.

"Certainly, we never expected it to be this popular," said Liebl.

Liebl said vintagevoter.ca has been a Twitter trending topic since its launch.

"We're, as you say, equal in who we make fun of."
DAVID LIEBL, 31, WHO FOUNDED VINTAGEVOTER.CA

Liebl calls the site a satirical look at national politics, and he hopes the site will encourage people to become more engaged in the political process.

"I won't suggest that looking at the site translates into a vote at the box, but it's my hope ... that people will become more engaged and aware of Canadian politics."

Liebl said he has had responses from at least one political party and he's hoping other camps will submit photos of their leaders in their younger days.

Oil spill anniversary marked

In a statement U.S. President Barack Obama pays tribute to those killed
Says significant progress made, but more work needs to be done

Relatives of some of the 11 men who died aboard the Deepwater Horizon oil rig flew over the Gulf of Mexico Wednesday, back to the epicentre of the worst offshore oil spill in the nation's history.

Vigils were scheduled in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida.

On April 20, 2010, the Deepwater Horizon, a rig owned by Transocean Ltd., burst into flames after drilling a well for BP PLC. Two days later the rig toppled into the Gulf and sank to the sea floor. Over the next 85 days, 206 million gallons of oil — 19 times more than the Exxon Valdez, spilled from the well. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Saskatchewan floodwaters yet to peak: Authorities

The Saskatchewan Watershed Authority is warning that floodwaters have yet to peak in eastern parts of the province.

John Fahlman, the authority's director of basin operations and groundwater management, says levels at Round Lake, Echo Lake and Katepwa, east of Regina, will rise yet again.

He says the water levels at Crooked Lake are starting to come down a bit now.

As for Regina, the peak of water coming from Wascana Creek shouldn't be any higher than it has already been.

Duane Mckay, director of emergency response with the Ministry of Corrections, Public Safety and Policing, says a state of emergency was issued today for the Ochapowace First Nation, in the southeast, where some preliminary work is being done to prevent flooding to homes.

There are still 13 communities in the province under a local state of emergency.

McKay says the province is still buying sandbags to ensure they don't run out. The province is moving supplies to the areas around Humboldt, Wynyard, Porcupine Plain, Kelvington and Lake Lenore where the snowpack is starting to melt.

McKay notes the ministry is also keeping an eye on the flooding situation in the southwest, around Val Marie and communities along the Frenchman River, where the snowpack still has yet to melt.

Maude Barlow battles to save Mother Earth

She wants a declaration of rights for our planet
'There's resistance because it hurts,' activist says

As the United Nations begins discussion on the idea of a declaration of rights for Mother Earth, a Canadian activist is helping lead the fight to obtain a "paradigm shift" in the way we perceive the Earth and its resources.

If we don't take care, says Maude Barlow, the planet and human beings are going to be in serious trouble.

Barlow, national chair of the Council of Canadians, says it's time for us to shift from an economic view of "unlimited market growth" to one that focuses on the fact the "Earth sustains all life."

"Our argument is our policies of unlimited growth, unregulated trade and then government deregulation … is putting the environment at risk," she said from the UN in New York.

40
As an example of the mishandling of resources, Maude Barlow cites a study reporting that by 2030 the demand for water in our world will outstrip supply by 40 per cent.

Barlow and other activists face a long, tough battle before the UN takes action.

She likens the fight to the one Eleanor Roosevelt carried out to get the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted.

"She fought so hard," Barlow said. "People mocked it. And that's the same situation here.

"It's humanity taking an evolutionary step forward, and there's resistance because it hurts."

Barlow and others would like to see the proposed Universal Declaration of the Rights for Mother Earth become a companion declaration to The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which was passed by the United Nations in 1948.

Cleaner's cold feet

Woman claims to have been paid in cash for working at 24 Sussex

A Somali-Canadian single mother, who said she was paid under the table to clean the prime minister's residence, skipped a news conference Wednesday where she was set to air her complaints.

Zahra Bulle spoke to The Canadian Press the evening before, describing how she had done janitorial work inside 24 Sussex Drive last year.

"I'm urging the government to protect workers like me in their government buildings." ZAHRA BULLE, IN A WRITTEN STATEMENT READ AT WEDNESDAY'S NEWS CONFERENCE

The organizers of the event, the Service Employees International Union, said Bulle decided to stay away after receiving a call from her employer.

They are still moving ahead with a legal complaint based on allegations Bulle and other workers were threatened with dismissal if they tried to organize. They are filing complaints with the Ontario Labour Relations Board and the federal Labour Department.

Quebec provincial police say a six-foot tall, 1,000-pound statue of Louis-Marie Grignion de Montfort has been found after it was stolen earlier this week. They say it was recovered Wednesday at a metal recycling plant in Trois-Rivieres and that it was intact.

Mother sentenced for killing daughter

8 Redhead will serve a little more than eight years after the judge agreed to give her double credit for the time served.

A Manitoba mother who suffocated her young daughter while the two were staying at a women's shelter has been sentenced to 12 years behind bars.

Nicole Redhead, who as a child witnessed her mother kill her father, had pleaded guilty to manslaughter last year.

Redhead, 29, had her three children taken away by Child and Family Services but regained custody of her toddler, Jaylene, in 2009.

Court heard how Redhead was in a woman's shelter that summer when she became violent with the crying two-year-old.

N.Y. jury convicts brother of torturing, raping half-sister

Man faces up to life in jail when he's sentenced

A New York man was convicted Wednesday of raping and scalding his mentally disabled half-sister before their mother suffocated her last year.

The Erie County jury deliberated four hours Wednesday before finding 32-year-old Luke Wright guilty on all 10 criminal counts.

During a weeklong trial in Buffalo, jurors heard how Wright and his mother kept Laura Cummings, 23, tied to a chair for much of the last two months of her life, often with a hood over her head because Wright said her staring bothered him. Cummings has been described as having the mental capacity of a preteen.

"It was his choices, his actions that made Laura Cummings a tortured prisoner in her own home."
PROSECUTOR THOMAS FINNERTY

Relying on Wright's own statements to police after Cummings' January 2010 death, prosecutors described how he burned her face with a boiling water, scalded her buttocks in a bathtub, regularly raped her and forcibly sodomized her with a broomstick.

Eva Cummings, the mother of Wright and the victim, pleaded guilty in October to second-degree murder for killing her daughter in their North Collins home, outside Buffalo, and is in prison.

Wright's lawyer tried to convince jurors Wright wasn't responsible, telling them he's been mentally retarded since birth, was brain-damaged by childhood beatings with bricks and bats, and was also a victim of his mother, whom he called "the personification of evil."

"No mother lived in that home," attorney John Nuchereno said in closing arguments. "A devil lived in that house and had for years and years."

His pepper spray system worked well ... on police

Dragon alarm backer arrested in weapons case

Montreal police officers executing a search warrant against a man who developed alarm systems that disperse pepper spray found out about their effectiveness the hard way Wednesday.

The officers received a blast of the pungent spray from an alarm that had not been disabled at the business premises of Daniel Filion, west of Montreal, police said.

Filion, his spouse and her adult daughter were charged with weapons trafficking, possession of prohibited weapons with intent to traffic, and conspiracy to traffic.

Dragon's fire

- The product: The Dragon security system is described on its website as versatile and compatible with other alarm systems.
- The pitch: "As soon as an intrusion is detected, a cayenne pepper squirt is ejected from the device and dissipates itself in the air," the website says.

Filion, 53, has long trumpeted the benefits of Dragon Anti-Intrusion — a security system he has discussed on TV and radio.

But authorities say the legality of the system is in question.

"When pepper spray is used against another person — even if that person is an aggressor — it's considered a prohibited weapon," said provincial police Sgt. Genevieve Bruneau.

Police say they found inactive grenades in Filion's home.

But they claim materials necessary to make them functional were nearby.

AND THEN THERE WAS ONE.

Ontario is now the only province in Canada where dental assistants are not a regulated health profession. This means that dentists can hire people without formal education to do the work of dental assistants. Dental assistants take radiographs, are responsible for infection control and may perform other intra-oral duties.

The Ontario Dental Assistants Association (ODAA), the certifying body for Ontario dental assistants feels this is a matter of public safety. Dental patients have the right to know that everyone working in a dental office is educated and formally trained.

The Ontario government will not review the ODAA's request for regulation until 2013. Meanwhile, for the good of your oral health and safety, ask if your dentist hires only ODAA certified dental assistants.

Mail bombs shock U.K. soccer fans

Celtic boss the target as war with Rangers heats up

The bitter soccer war between Glasgow clubs Rangers and Celtic got uglier Wednesday.

Fans were shocked to learn that parcel bombs were sent to Celtic manager Neil Lennon and two leading club supporters.

The devices were intercepted before they reached their intended targets.

"They were definitely capable of causing significant harm and injury," said Det. Chief Supt. John Mitchell of Strathclyde police.

Sectarian tensions are regularly played out between Celtic fans, who are mostly Catholic, and Rangers fans, who are mostly Protestant.

The current season is one of the closest in years, with both clubs fighting for the Scottish Premier League title.

The next matchup comes Easter Sunday.

Africa bears brunt of rising food costs

KHALIL SENOSI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Kalekye Mutunga waits for customers at her food kiosk in Kibera, Nairobi.

Global costs are 36 per cent higher today than a year ago: World Bank

Stephen Omandi scratched out the number "55" on the sign advertising buckets of maize and wrote in the new price: 60 Kenya shillings.

The price hike amounted to only $0.06 US. But for the residents of Nairobi's largest slum, where most people live on $1 a day, that 10 per cent increase is enough to make the essential food stuff unaffordable.

Food prices are rising across the globe, driven in part by the higher transport costs that accompany rising oil prices. But no region has been hit harder by rising food costs than Africa over the last three months.

Wheat costs 87 per cent more in Sudan. Rice is up 30 per cent in Chad. Maize has risen at least 25 per cent in Uganda, Somalia, Mozambique and Kenya.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vulnerable

The World Bank said much of the recent increase of food prices was due to a 21 per cent rise in oil prices in the first quarter, partly due to unrest in the Middle East and North Africa. Higher crude oil prices mean products like corn and vegetable oil are more frequently used as biofuels. Transportation costs rise.

▶ "More poor people are suffering and more people could become poor because of high and volatile food prices," said World Bank Group president Robert B. Zoellick. "We have to put food first and protect the poor and vulnerable, who spend most of their money on food."

1,150 First Love, a U.S. aid group, feeds 1,150 students a day in Kibera, Nairobi. Breakfast is a cup of porridge.

- In Nairobi's largest slum, Kibera, many people eat what more affluent Kenyans simply don't want: Dried mini sardines, cow lungs, and fish heads discarded from higher-end shops and restaurants.
- Many of the slum's youngest are fed by the World Food Program or aid groups.
- "Kids will sneak an extra cup (of porridge) and take it home. We're OK with that because we know that will be his dinner," said aid worker Philip Muthui.

SAY NO TO HARRIS:

Magna shareholders advised to vote against director

Magna International shareholders should vote against the re-election of lead director Mike Harris and two other board members for failing to meet their responsibilities in the controversial deal to eliminate the company's dual stock structure, a top international proxy firm says.

ISS Proxy Advisory Services, which offers voting recommendations to institutional investors around the world, criticized the three directors who sat on a special committee for not advising shareholders properly on the deal's fairness last year that resulted in a huge payout to founder Frank Stronach.

Harris, a former Ontario premier, led the special independent committee of directors and negotiations with Stronach and his daughter Belinda, in efforts to negotiate a better deal for shareholders.

'Problematic'

- In its report, ISS described Magna's compensation practices as "problematic" for non-executive officers who received 5.5 per cent of the company's pre-tax profits.
- Frank Stronach received about $60 million US for consulting services and other duties.

However, Harris told an Ontario Securities Commission hearing looking into the deal that Frank Stronach, Magna's chairman, remained firm on the terms. Stronach indicated that if Magna's board did not agree to the price, corporate control would remain in his family's hands despite the trust holding just a tiny fraction of the company's equity, Harris said.

The commission intervened in the proposed deal by forcing Magna to produce more information for shareholders before a vote.

The recommendation by ISS comes in advance of Magna's annual shareholders meeting next month where Stronach, 78, has indicated he will step down as chairman but remain honorary chairman.

The Stronach family trust still remains one of the company's biggest A shareholders.

Workers forced into early retirement they can't afford: Poll

Canadian workers are increasingly being forced into an early retirement they can't afford, compelling them to get new jobs to maintain their income levels, according to a new RBC poll.

And those still working may have a skewed vision of their perfect retirement, according to the study, RBC Retirement Myths & Realities.

The poll found only 59 per cent of retired Canadians chose when to stop working. But a full 83 per cent of those currently working believe they'll get to choose when to retire. Of those retired, 18 per cent left at their employer's request — the top reason for retirement among those who did not choose to stop working. Employer's request was followed by health reasons (14 per cent) and having reached mandatory retirement age (six per cent.) When asked about being ready to retire, 14 per cent who are retired said they had saved enough to live "comfortably" while 25 per cent of workers thought they will have saved enough to live comfortably by the time they choose to retire.

HANDOUT

▶ Lee Anne Davies

"The most surprising thing here is the fact that so many non-retirees think that they're going to have a choice about their retirement," said Lee Anne Davies, the head of retirement strategies at RBC. "When we talk with our clients we ask them when they think they'll retire, but we always build into a plan different types of options for different scenarios."

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

41 The study found many recent retirees have gone back to work because they needed money, with 41 per cent of recent retirees reporting they got a new job this year because they needed the income, versus 32 per cent last year.

Stunning premium

The deal, which shareholders overwhelmingly supported in a vote later, gave a Stronach family trust about $1 billion in cash, Magna A stock, consulting contracts and a stake in a company electric car venture by eliminating the firm's multiple voting B shares.

The value of the cash and stock represented a stunning premium of about 1,800 per cent for the Stronach trust's former B shares.

"... We believe the special committee's decision not to advise shareholders as to fairness was unacceptable," ISS Proxy Services said in a report this week.

Despite tablet popularity, Intel's Q1 net income rises

Intel Corp. has sent a strong message to Wall Street: Tablets may be transforming the computer industry, but there's still a lot of money left to be made in the huge market for traditional PCs.

Despite all the hoopla around Apple Inc.'s iPad and an army of competitors, Intel reported late Tuesday that its first-quarter net income jumped 29 per cent as corporate demand for new PCs led to numerous orders for Intel chips.

The results easily topped analysts' projections, as did Intel's second-quarter guidance. Its shares rose more than four per cent in extended trading.

The stock move reflects the belief of many investors that Intel has plenty of opportunities to plumb its core businesses for more profits as it adjusts to a shifting technology landscape.

It's a 'struggle' to save: Survey

Repaying debt only going to get harder as spiking inflation to drive interest rates up, experts say

Nearly one-third of Canadians don't have enough money to cover living expenses, while 38 per cent have no savings at all, says a survey from TD Bank.

And with interest rates expected to rise this summer, clearing debts probably won't get any easier.

"I think it's worrisome," said Carrie Russell, senior vice-president of retail banking at TD Canada Trust.

The representative survey of 1,003 Canadians says 30 per cent of Canadians don't have enough money to cover rent and food bills.

The respondents said their top goals were: Saving for retirement (73 per cent), paying off credit cards (72 per cent) and major purchases or vacations (53 per cent each).

Russell said 12 per cent of those surveyed couldn't save because "they shopped beyond their means." Nineteen per cent under the age of 35 said they spent too much on shopping, she added.

"This really comes down to the age-old question of budgeting, choices and skills required in making plans for a healthy financial future."

On the flip side, 30 per cent said they had enough money saved to cover living expenses for at least four months.

She recommends a cushion of three to six months of income saved to get through unexpected financial shocks.

Success is the best revenge for Taco Bell

Fast food chain puts out ad wondering why it didn't get an apology after false advertising lawsuit dropped

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Taco Bell was successful in defending a lawsuit that claimed its meat did not have beef to be called that.

Taco Bell took a parting shot Wednesday at the law firm that filed a class-action suit over the filling of its tacos and burritos.

In full-page newspaper advertisements, the company asks in big bold type: "Would it kill you to say you're sorry?"

The chain ran the ads in publications across the United States, including in Alabama, home of law firm Beasley Allen, which launched the suit. The ads amount to a victory lap by Taco Bell after the firm dropped the action this week.

Beasley Allen filed the false-advertising suit in California in January, alleging the chain's meat mixture contained binders and extenders and did not have enough beef to be called that. It said it dropped the lawsuit after Taco Bell made changes to its marketing and product disclosure.

Not so, the chain insists. In its ads, Taco Bell says it made no changes to its products, ingredients or advertising, no money was exchanged and there was no settlement agreement as a result of the suit being dropped.

The law firm had no immediate comment.

In the ads, Taco Bell gets in a final dig at the lawyers who brought the ill-fated suit — "You got it wrong, and you're probably feeling pretty bad right about now. But you know what always helps? Saying to everyone, 'I'm sorry.' C'mon, you can do it!" THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a wrap

- Taco Bell says its taco filling contains 88 per cent USDA-inspected beef and the rest is water, spices and a mixture of oats, starch and other ingredients that contribute to what it calls "the quality of its product." It says it uses no extenders to add volume to the filling.
- The fast food chain has almost 5,600 U.S. restaurants. It is owned by Yum Brands Inc., based in Louisville, Ky., which is also the parent of Pizza Hut and KFC. Taco Bell accounts for about 60 per cent of Yum's profits in the U.S.

WHAT WILL THE PUNDITS SAY?

Whether you're new to the country, new to voting, or just an ignouramous (note the Canadian spelling), you may be confused by some of the lingo you've been hearing since the "writ" was "dropped" in our "democracy." If that sounds like you, then here's a special glossary to bring you meaning as you decide who is the lesser of five evils.

CANADA VOTES 2011 GLOSSARY

Advance poll: A place where Canadians who are unable to cast ballots on voting day exercise their right to avoid voting in advance.

Coalition: Traditionally a temporary alliance of political parties used to form a government when no single party can do so. More recently understood to be the worst, most reckless, most despicable action a party can take short of mailing people flesh-eating disease.

Democracy: A form of government designed to give the maximum number of people in society the impression that what they think matters. In Canada, usually accompanied by a question mark. (Google it and see.)

Gerrymander: To divide electoral ridings in a way that favours one party over another; for example, if the Conservative government created a riding that included only affluent suburbs, or if Elizabeth May created a riding that included only her house.

Husting: Any place where a candidate meets voters; originally contained an L.

Independent: A candidate so true to his or her own ideals and personal vision for Canada that he or she has no chance of winning.

Poll: A survey that indicates the voting intentions of people who still have landlines and are so lonely that they're just happy to have someone to talk to, 19 times out of 20.

Pundit: A political commentator who forms opinions by commenting on the opinions of other pundits. The identity of The Original Pundit is a closely guarded secret.

Green party: The Glossary Consortium has ruled that the Green party will not get its own definition until it has a seat in the House of Commons.

TORONTO. Children's entertainer and activist Raffi is urging "Beluga grads" to vote in the federal election.

The beloved singer-songwriter, author and founder of the Centre for Child Honouring makes the plea in a new video posted on YouTube.

In the piece, entitled Raffi 4 Canada, the 62-year-old tells "Beluga grads" that if they're really passionate about Canada like he is, they will want to vote May 2.

He also outlines his hopes for the future of the country, saying he thinks Canada needs to strengthen its democratic traditions and enhance them.

Raffi closes out the video by singing a new election-themed verse to his hit 1980 children's tune, Baby Beluga.

"Now you've grown and you're on your way, making waves in the boundless bay, with your shining light and your dreams alive, for the young you'll have one day," he croons.

"Grown up Beluga, grown up Beluga, come and rock the vote, please get out and vote, we need to hear you."

Get cracking to eggs-traordinary tree in Germany

Volker Kraft's apple sapling sported just 18 eggs when he first decorated it for Easter in 1965. Decades later, the sturdy tree is festooned with 9,800 eggs, artfully decorated with everything from sequins to seashells.

Decking trees with hollowed-out, painted eggs for Easter is popular in Germany, but the 75-year-old retiree's annual creation has become something special in Saalfeld. Last year, it drew more than 13,000 visitors.

▶ Volker Kraft's tree

Kraft needs two weeks and countless trips up and down his ladder to hang the eggs and the task has become a little heavier each year since he began the decorations in 1965.

Kraft plans to add another 200 eggs next year, bringing his total to 10,000 — and then stop, if only because he is running out of room to store the mountain of boxes.

NATURE CONSERVANCY OF CANADA POWERED BY TOSHIBA TECHNOLOGY

WWF & LOBLAW TEAM UP TO BRING GREENERY TO SCHOOLS

HOW DOES RECYCLING WORK?

THE FIRST STEP IN A LONG JOURNEY

Earth Hour began this year where it always begins — on the east coast of Australia. For the next 24 hours it moved steadily through time zones around the world as millions of people switched off their lights, appliances and television sets for one symbolic hour. Around the world familiar landmarks faded to dark — Big Ben, the Eiffel Tower, the Brandenburg Gate, the Parthenon, Forbidden City and Mount Rushmore. In the Philippines a few television stations even halted their broadcasts. Organizers are still tallying the numbers, but Earth Hour 2010 was already counted as the biggest on record, with more than a billion people taking part.

Jed Goldberg admits that events like Earth Hour don't really benefit the environment in any appreciable way, but he says they are powerful symbols nevertheless. Goldberg is the president of Earth Day Canada, an organization that coordinates Earth Day events, promotes year-round programs and educates Canadians on environmental issues. "The fact that so many millions of people around the world take part in these events shows that there is an environmental consciousness out there that didn't exist 20 years ago," he says. "It's very encouraging."

In fact you have to go back 40 years to truly gauge the progress of the environmental movement. The first Earth Day took place in the United States in 1970, in the era of the Kent State Massacre and campus sit-ins. Environmentalists like Rachael Carson, Jacques Cousteau and Jane Goodall were starting to become household names, while an iconic photograph of a fragile planet Earth on a background of black nothingness — an image taken by Apollo astronauts on the way to the moon — captured humanity's imagination. "Earth Day was supposed to be a one-day wonder," says Goldberg. "Another excuse for a college sit-in. But it touched a nerve, and 20 million Americans took part."

That's a small number, in retrospect. Last year 90 million Americans switched off their lights for Earth Hour, and many more millions took part in Earth Day and Earth Month activities around the world. But is the movement really having an appreciable affect on the environment? Goldberg says yes. "Today environmental awareness is part of our culture here in Canada," he says. "It's part of our daily routine. Twenty years ago a lot of people didn't even know what composting was. Nowadays a lot of urban Canadians have composters in their back yards. Recycling programs are ubiquitous and there's a real awareness of things like organic food and energy saving."

In fact, studies show in just the first four years of the last decade, composting increased the amount of organic waste diverted from Canadian landfills by 70 percent. Recycling has also increased by nearly 10 percent since 2006, decreasing the amount of waste coming from Canadian households by about 4 percent. But carbon emissions in Canada are increasing faster than the population, and recent events like the nuclear reactor crisis in Japan and last year's oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico point to the fact that much more needs to be done. "We've just scratched the surface," says Goldberg. "Shifting our environmental sensibilities is just the first step, but it's an important step."

TOSHIBA'S GREEN MACHINES

Pelee Island

IT'S A CHANGING WORLD. THOSE WHO THRIVE DIVERSIFY, AND CONSERVE THEIR RESOURCES WHERE THEY CAN.

You hear this sort of talk a lot in business, but these principles are bigger than profits and losses. They describe the state of our planet, too. Companies like Toshiba of Canada make it their business to see the connection.

For Toshiba, the merging of corporate and social responsibility goes deep; and it's getting deeper still, with the announcement of Toshiba's alliance with the Nature Conservancy of Canada (NCC). This three-year partnership will support the two organizations' shared core belief: that conservation of the biodiversity of ecosystems is the key to environmental management.

"We believe NCC is providing a great benefit to Canadians," says Ralph Hyatt, Toshiba Canada's president and CEO. The private, non-profit group partners with corporate and individual landowners to conserve some of Canada's most precious, and imperiled, natural spaces, and the plant and animal life inhabiting them. They protect the wild, yet their methods are anything but low-tech. That's where Toshiba comes in.

Toshiba is the largest private sector supporter of NCC's Land Information System (LIS). Developed by NCC science staff, the LIS will roll out Canada-wide this year, allowing NCC to report on its achievements in an integrated way, using categories such as Species, Threats, and Stewardship Actions, and ultimately helping it make the strategic decisions necessary to better protect Canadian land and species.

Over the next three years, Toshiba will support LIS with funding and mobile computing technology in the form of laptop computers, adapted for multiple uses, including training, in-office and in-field conservation work, and stewardship management. Using Toshiba technology and LIS, NCC staff will report, plan, manage and monitor properties more efficiently, resulting in better time and resources management, and better conservation overall.

PARTNERS IN PROGRESS

On one side: a high-tech company with a social ethic, looking for a worthy cause. On the other: a charity helping to preserve the planet, but sorting through mountains of data. Toshiba of Canada and the Nature Conservancy of Canada (NCC) belong together, because each offers the other what it needs.

NCC is an organization dedicated to protecting highly threatened landscapes—those vital to Canada's ecological integrity. It's an efficient organization by any measure, keeping overhead costs at 15 per cent, including administration, fundraising, and communication. However, it also requires the help of more than 200 staff and volunteers to collect, store and analyze the enormous amounts of information needed to plan its activities. To keep things running smoothly, and with Toshiba's support, NCC has developed a Land Information System (LIS).

"The LIS allows our experts to access critical information instantly, in the field or the office," explains NCC president and CEO, John Lounds. "Through our partnership with Toshiba, we can integrate powerful technology into that conservation work." And the arrangement does more than save time for NCC staffers; it will also improve conservation outcomes and strengthen NCC's bonds with outside partners, like landowners.

"Toshiba's contribution allows us to better share information that impacts our conservation efforts," says Lynn Gran, NCC's vice-president, strategic philanthropy, and CDO. "That's how you create true win-win outcomes. With Toshiba's support, we're building a system that helps us conserve more landscapes, protect more species, and create a natural legacy for generations of Canadians."

With Earth Day on the way, NCC and Toshiba expect conservation to be top-of-mind for many more Canadians. Those ready to help protect habitats and species can learn how at www.natureconservancy.ca/forcefornature.

ENERGY STAR HONOURS TOSHIBA CANADA

Conservation is its own reward, but a little recognition never hurts, either. Toshiba Canada is proud to be named 'Recruit of the Year' at the 2010 Energy Star Market Transformation Awards, acknowledging the company's efforts to market energy efficient products to Canadians.

Today, all of Toshiba's notebooks and LED TVs bear the Energy Star symbol, meaning they reduce energy consumption and costs by 10 to 65 percent over conventional models. Toshiba continues to use the symbol extensively on packaging of qualified products and has developed environmental specification sheets to better educate consumers about them.

The awards are presented annually by the Government of Canada.

Leading innovation leads to a better world.

When it comes to building our award-winning products, we believe less is more. So we minimize waste and use recycled materials wherever we can, while constantly looking for ways to reduce energy consumption. Recycling programs keep discarded technology from fouling the soil and atmosphere, as does our devotion to worldwide environmental initiatives. Plus, we check to see that the people who make the materials that go into our products follow earth-friendly practices just as we do so we can all enjoy the latest technologies amid a cleaner, more sustainable world.

LITTLE GREEN THUMBS

HOW SMALL INVESTMENTS IN OUR PLANET CAN MAKE A BIG DIFFERENCE

"It's about using the five senses," says Anna Hill, "getting outside and getting their hands dirty." Hill is referring to the Givens-Shaw Sowers and Growers Club for students in Grades 1 to 3 in downtown Toronto that she co-founded with teacher Kim McIntyre.

Sitting in McIntyre's sun-filled classroom at Givins-Shaw Junior Public School, Hill and McIntyre recount the importance of bridging the gap between the school's students and the natural world. "I love growing things," says McIntyre, "and I thought kids would be interested in a gardening club. I never expected to see 60 kids join up."

Thanks in part to a Green CommUnity Grant from WWF, supported by Loblaw through its plastic-bag charge, the Sowers and Growers Club is starting its first major project. The children are turning an unused patch of land at the school into a beautiful garden for native plants and butterflies. A series of cedar beds will become a herb garden, a salad-and-greens patch and two "soup" gardens.

"The leadership we are seeing from students and schools in taking action for our planet is truly inspiring," says WWF's VP of Fundraising, Christina Topp. "It's amazing to think that this is made possible through the Loblaw plastic-bag charge."

The five-cent charge is meant to reduce the number of plastic bags used by Canadians. The company has already seen a 73% reduction in plastic-bag production. But Loblaw doesn't stop there. Through corporate donations and partial proceeds from the plastic-bag charge, Loblaw funds WWF efforts to inspire simple, everyday actions that add up to a big environmental impact.

Along with the Green CommUnity School Grants, these efforts include National Sweater Day in February, when more than 500,000 Canadians put on sweaters and turned down their thermostats, and the Great Canadian Shoreline Cleanup, which involves more than 50,000 Canadians picking up litter along our shores in September.

"These three programs help Canadians understand how they can help sustain our environment," says Topp. "And the Givins-Shaw project is a wonderful example of how these vital lessons are passed on from one generation to the next."

Hill couldn't agree more. She is both an engaged parent at Givins-Shaw and a volunteer coordinator of the greenhouse in nearby Trinity Bellwoods Park. She points to the launch of a farmers' market in the park as a catalyst for the club. "It was an opportunity to learn about the importance of a local food economy. We wanted to show the kids that, just like those farmers, they could grow their own vegetables, and we could use the greenhouse to start from seeds."

At this moment, the seeds are germinating a short walk from the school at the greenhouse. The club is divided into two groups of 30. Groups of eager children alternate once a week, tending to their plants and monitoring their progress. Their enthusiasm is contagious. "When can we eat this?" wonders one student, Alice. "I'm hungry!"

Small actions can make a big impact

WWF would like to thank Loblaw Companies Limited for its commitment to conservation through the Plastic Bag Reduction Program. Loblaw has eliminated 2.5 billion plastic bags from existence and supported WWF's efforts to engage Canadians in environmental action. A simple bag charge has turned into energy conservation and awareness, cleaning up our shorelines, engaging schools in environmental activities and so much more for our planet. Thank you, Loblaw!

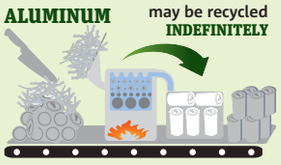
HOW DOES RECYCLING WORK?

ALUMINUM

may be recycled INDEFINITELY



Cans are shredded, washed, baled and sent to the factory. There they are turned into molten metal and recast.

PLASTIC

may be recycled MANY TIMES

Plastic recycling is more difficult than other materials. Bottles are cut up, crushed and baled. Bales are extracted and processed.

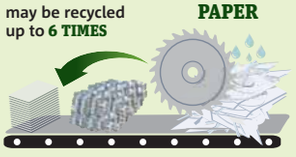
GLASS

may be recycled INDEFINITELY

Glass is crushed up and sent to the factory. There it is melted and put in mold to be blown again.

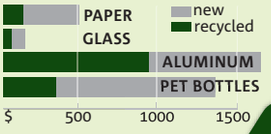
PAPER

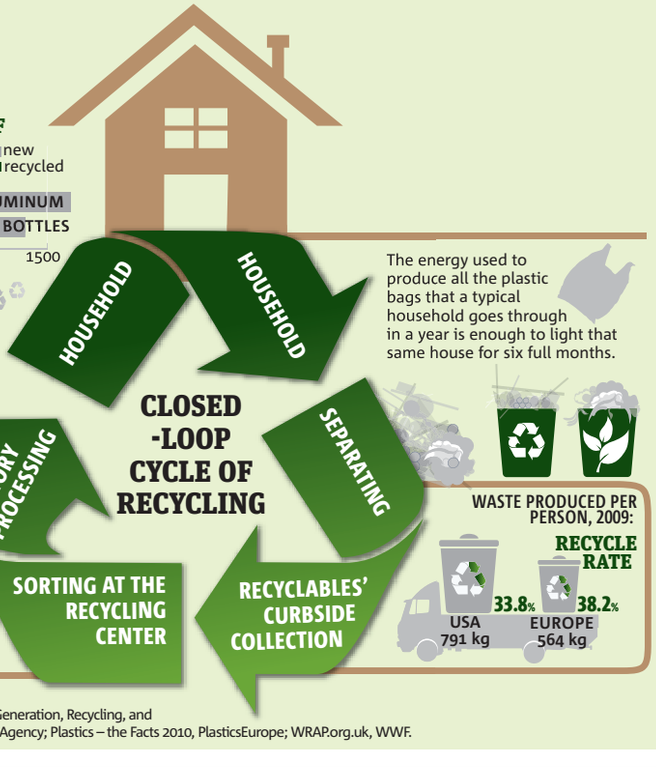
may be recycled up to 6 TIMES



Paper is baled and transported to the paper mill. There it is broken, deinked, repulped and added to the pulp of "virgin" paper.

RECYCLING PAYS OFF





The energy used to produce all the plastic bags that a typical household goes through in a year is enough to light that same house for six full months.

ECOTOURISM ADVENTURES

UNIQUE DESTINATIONS OFFER LIFE CHANGING EXPERIENCES

Danny Gilfoy and Michael Waugh were just trying to escape a bleak Nova Scotia winter when they headed for Costa Rica this past February. They ended up escaping the confines of human civilization for two incredible weeks. Costa Rica was a magical place full of natural wonders that the two Halifax natives had never seen before. They hired guides to take them through mangrove swamps teaming with crocodiles, visited beaches where leatherback turtle conservation projects were underway and a rehabilitation centre that returned injured howler monkeys to the wild. They tried their hand at white water rafting and canyoning and rode long zip lines through rainforest canopies. In the quiet evenings they thrilled to the sloths and coatimundis that crept curiously close their rented cabin.

When nothing else was planned, Gilfoy and Waugh hiked the trails that honeycombed through the rain forests and cloud forests near their accommodations — well marked and maintained to keep hikers from trampling the delicate ecosystem and a safe distance away from venomous snakes and insects. "If you have a good guide with you, they will spot things that you wouldn't notice," says Gilfoy. "They'll explain a lot about the ecology of the place that you would otherwise miss."

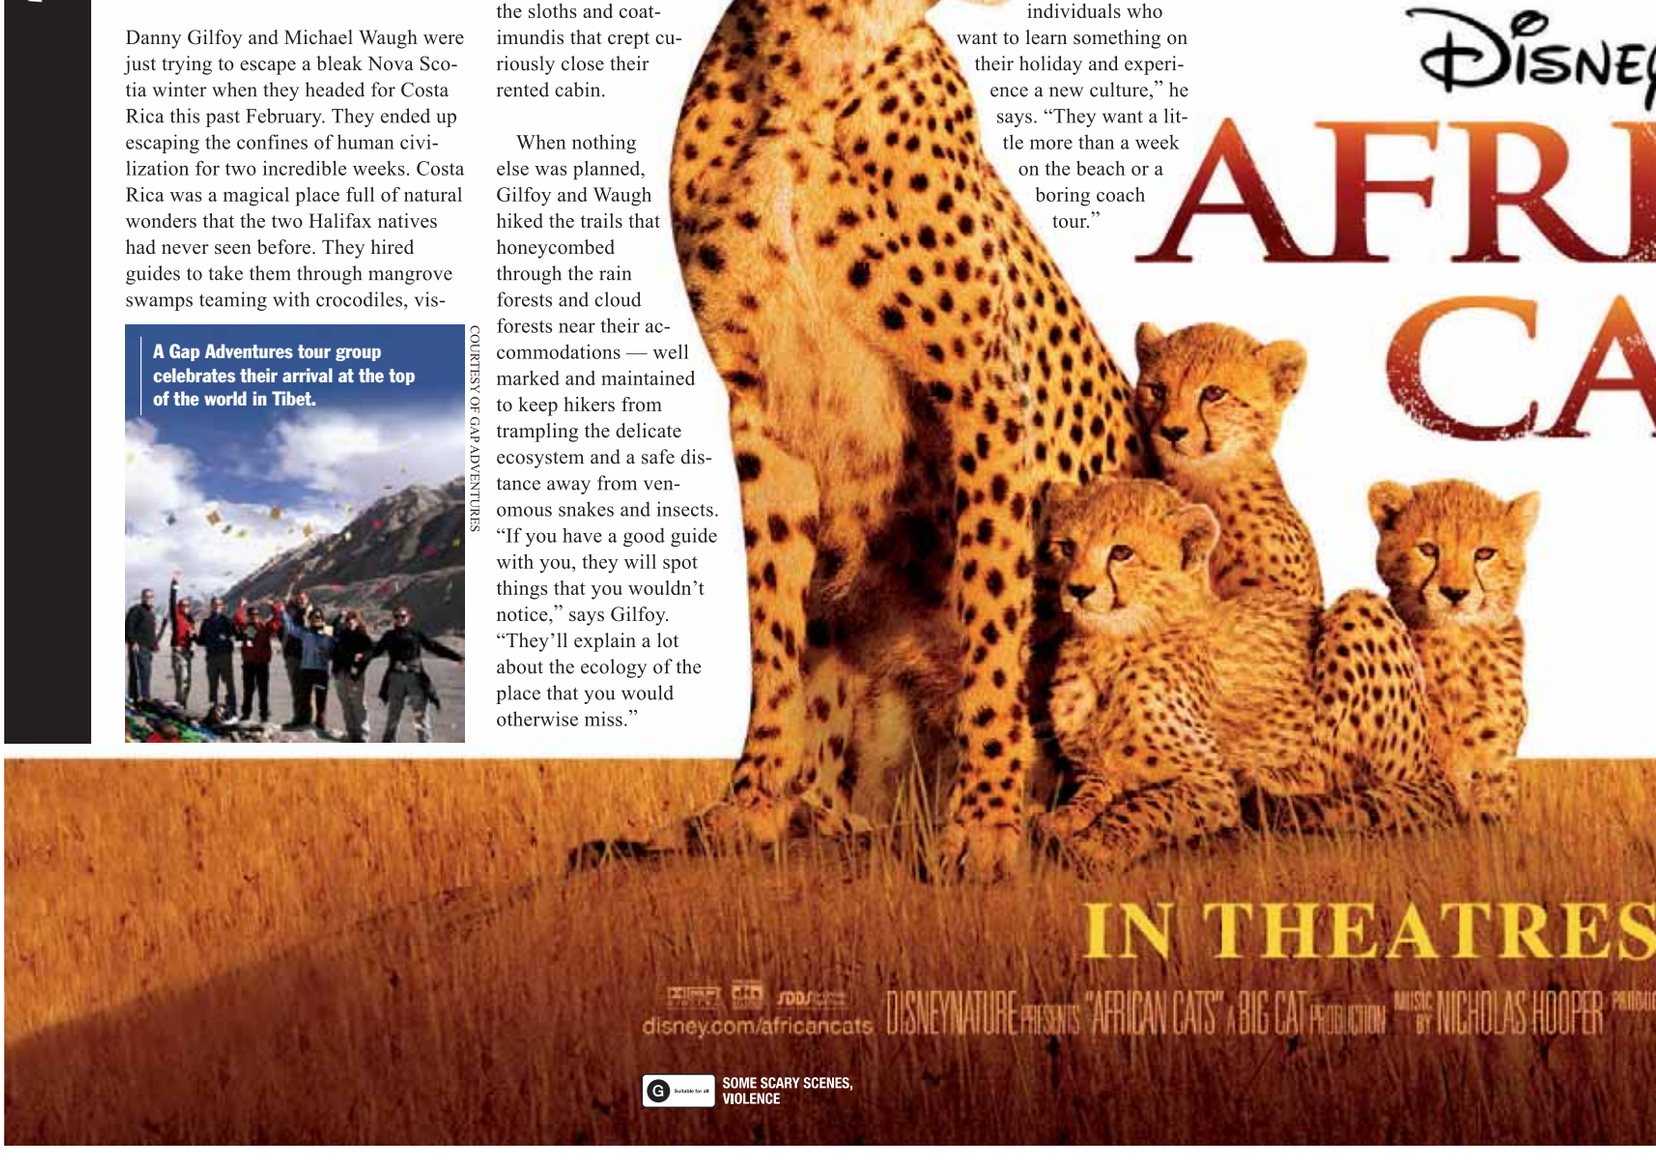
Gilfoy and Waugh are part of a new travel mindset, says Bruce Poon Tip, founder of the Toronto-based adventure travel company Gap Adventures. They are eco-tourists. "Eco-tourists are individuals who want to learn something on their holiday and experience a new culture," he says. "They want a little more than a week on the beach or a boring coach tour."

Poon Tip started Gap Adventures in 1990 as an alternative for traditional forms of travel like cruise ships, resorts and coach tours. Today his company offers more than 1,300 trips to over 100 countries — many to exotic destinations like the Galapagos Islands, Antarctica or Tibet – places with wildlife or spiritual highlights that often create life-changing experiences for his clients. "I believed travel, more specifically innovative travel experiences, was a powerful force that could facilitate change, and ultimately change people's lives."

Gilfoy says the Costa Rica experience was definitely a life-changer, and he recommends that anyone who wants to get the most out of an ecotourism adventure should hire a reputable travel company to handle the details. "The company that we used picked us up at the airport and drove us back. For two weeks they arranged everything, based on what we told them we wanted to do. We didn't have to worry about a thing."

It is still a vacation, after all.



CANADIAN NATURAL WONDERS

The Bay of Fundy between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick is a Mecca for sea kayakers, rockhounds, whale watchers and outdoor lovers.

COURTESY OF NOVA SCOTIA ECONOMIC AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT AND TOURISM

The Haliburton Forest Tour is one of the most unique hiking experiences in a country awash with great hiking trails. The four-hour guided hike starts along the bank of a scenic river near the Ontario town of Haliburton, then ascends 20 meters into the top of the forest canopy via a suspended boardwalk. It's an aspect of the Canadian forest that most Ontarians have never seen, despite the fact that the Haliburton Forest lies just a few hours drive from cities like Toronto, Ottawa and London.

Mount Assiniboine is one of British Columbia's nearly 400 provincial parks.

COURTESY OF TOURISM BRITISH COLUMBIA

It's a fact that many Canadian city dwellers seem unaware of. No matter where you live in this country, it's possible to spend the day immersed in the natural world and still be home in time for dinner.

The natural drama is everywhere. In Nova Scotia every September millions of plovers and sandpipers gather along a thin strip of beach in the Bay of Fundy, blanketing the mud flats and gorging themselves on shrimp, preparing for a nonstop migratory flight to South America. At the Saguenay-Saint-Laurent Marine Park where the Saguenay River meets the Saint Lawrence, 13 species of whales can be seen in one place as they feed in the rich waters. At Point Pelee National Park in the southern tip of Ontario, keen observers can spot almost 400 species of birds and a variety of plants that aren't found anywhere else in Canada.

Western city dwellers are even closer to nature. Winnipeg sits at the edge of three major Canadian ecosystems — the tallgrass prairie to the west and south, the Canadian shield to the east and the interlake region to the north. In Calgary and Edmonton, an hour's drive west puts day trip adventurers into the foothills of the Rocky Mountains. The same distance east opens up the harsh, beautiful world of the badlands. And British Columbia, with five spectacular national parks and nearly 400 provincial parks, is one of the great ecotourism destinations on the planet.

Taken together it represents a lifetime of exploring for Canadian urbanites. One day trip at a time.

CANADIAN ECOTOURISM DESTINATIONS WITHIN EASY REACH

BAY OF FUNDY: Currently on the short list of choices for the "seven wonders of the natural world" the Bay of Fundy between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick is a mecca for whale and bird watchers, fossil hunters, kayakers and photographers.

ALGONQUIN PARK: The oldest provincial park in Canada is also one of the country's finest. Within easy reach from Ottawa, Algonquin Park is a chance to see big game wildlife in its natural state, and follow in the footsteps of the Group of Seven.

CAP TOURMENTE NATIONAL WILDLIFE AREA: Just a short drive north of Quebec City in Quebec's spectacular Charlevoix region, Cap Tourmente is a major snow goose migration stopover and an internationally recognized tidal marsh wetland.

MANTARIO TRAIL: Located about 150 kilometers east of Winnipeg, the 63-kilometer-long Mantario Trail in Whiteshell Provincial Park is not for the ill-prepared, but it's a good place to experience the natural wonders along the edge of the Canadian shield.

MALIGNE CANYON: One of the most dramatic hikes in Alberta's Jasper National Park, Maligne Canyon is a deep canyon complete with waterfalls, glacier carved caverns and spectacular gorges.

JOHNSTON CANYON: An easy drive from Calgary, Johnston Canyon in Banff National Park offers hikers a chance to see as many as seven waterfalls, depending on how much energy they want to exert.

SEA KAYAKING IN HOWE SOUND: With practically a lifetime of natural getaways within easy reach of downtown Vancouver, it's hard to know where to start. A guided sea kayaking tour of Howe Sound is one option — complete with epic mountain scenery, seabirds and possible orca sightings. A number of local outfitters offer rentals, instructions and qualified guides for novice paddlers.

TEN STEPS YOU CAN TAKE NOW

1. SHOP SMART: Buy what you need, not what you want, and consider borrowing or renting things you use once in a while. Think "second hand."
2. SAVE: Use compact fluorescent light bulbs, low flow faucets and shower heads.
3. CONSIDER ALTERNATIVE TRANSPORTATION : Municipal transit, bicycles, car share programs and proper car maintenance can have a big impact.
4. MAKE SENSIBLE FOOD CHOICES: Eat local and organic, and cut down on meat products.
5. WASH CLOTHES RESPONSIBLY: Think cold water and air drying.
6. HEAT AND COOL YOUR HOME CAREFULLY: Set summer air conditioners to around 25°C and winter thermostats to around 20°C. Install programmable thermostats and ceiling fans.
7. STAY CLOSE TO HOME: Vacation, work and shop as close to home as possible.
8. THINK BATHROOM BASICS: Take short showers instead of baths and turn off faucets when brushing your teeth.
9. CLEAN CAREFULLY: Choose natural, non-toxic cleaners or make your own with things like vinegar, baking soda and water.
10. DON'T DISCARD: Reuse, recycle or donate instead.

Spike fires up Perry

Director Tyler Perry has had enough of fellow African-Americans, especially Spike Lee, attacking him for his films Madea is back in Tyler Perry's Madea's Big Happy Family

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN HOLLYWOOD

Tyler Perry has something he'd like to get off his chest. "Spike (Lee) can go straight to hell! You can print that," the self-made entertainment mogul says. "I am sick of him talking about me … I am sick of him talking about black people going to see movies. This is what he said: 'You vote by what you see,' as if black people don't know what they want to see."

The two filmmakers have hardly been close since Lee started lambasting Perry's work two years ago, saying that Perry's work is "troubling" and "harkens back to Amos and Andy." A war of words began between Perry and Lee, and Perry is ready to put the whole thing behind him. "Spike needs to shut the hell up," he says.

While Perry insists he tries his best to stay positive, the amount of criticism of him out there has reached such a level that he had to respond, culminating with a letter to fans he posted online this week warning of the "folks out there that work overtime trying to keep people from seeing my movies," including his latest, Tyler Perry's Madea's Big Happy Family, out this weekend. "I don't even understand it (but) this is where the whole Spike Lee (comment) comes from — the negativity, 'This is Stepin Fetchit, this is coon-ery, this is buffoonery,'" he says. "And they try to get people to get on this bandwagon with them, to get this mob mentality to come against what I'm doing.

"I'm tired of just laying down, tired of just being nice and letting them say whatever they want to say however they want to say it without people knowing what the intent really is," Perry says.

What surprises Perry most is how much of the criticism comes from within the black community.

"I've never seen Jewish people attack Seinfeld and say, 'This is a stereotype.' I've never seen Italian people attack The Sopranos," he says. "It's always black people, and this is something that I cannot undo … . And I'm sick of it from us. We don't have to worry about anybody else trying to destroy us and take shots because we do it to ourselves."

Highlighted by the dramatic narration of Samuel L. Jackson, African Cats may be entertainment-focused, but it's still an informative documentary that looks at a pair of feline families struggling in the African Savanna. While danger lurks at every turn (from cub-snatching hyenas to river-roaming crocodile), filmmakers Keith Scholey and Alastair Fothergill accompany easy-to-digest storytelling with gorgeous images of wildlife in rare and stunning moments of natural suspense.

Here's a colourful, earnest but rather tepid dramedy about our current approximation of life and love through complete electronic connectedness, versus actual human contact. Attractive, quasi-available singles isolate themselves behind devices and "rosters" of casual lovers; they've lost interest in taking real risks. It's tough to relate to Textuality, the message is loud and clear but the delivery fails due to too much cultural cuteness.

Movie reviews

See it twice | See it now | Worth watching | Yawn | Don't bother

The Warring States

Genre: Historical Epic
Director: Jin Chen
Stars: Honglei Sun, Kim Hee-Seon, Kiichi Nakai

The Warring States is a gorgeous film that's easy to admire aesthetically, but in terms of tone and narrative is simply too confused and uneven to work properly as art or entertainment. The film is about two feuding military strategists in the midst of an endless war. Formally partners, one is kidnapped by the other to reveal his secrets and feigns madness to escape. PHIL BROWN

The High Cost of Living

Genre: Drama
Director: Deborah Chow
Stars: Zach Braff, Isabelle Blais

Zach Braff carries the heavyweight of The High Cost of Living and its somewhat implausible storyline. After a pregnant woman (Isabelle Blais) is hit-and-run by an American drug dealer (Braff), the guilt-ridden culprit befriends the victim to the questionable point of romance. With nowhere positive to go, the film may be gloomy but its talented stars keep the drama buoyant. STEVE GOW

Repeaters

Genre: Thriller
Director: Carl Bessai
Stars: Dustin Milligan, Amanda Crew, Richard de Klerk

Repeaters is about three troubled young drug addicts in rehab that relive the same day over and over until they set a few things right. It's supposed to be a dark and brooding thriller, but given the fact that everyone in the audience will be thinking of Groundhog Day from the second the movie starts, it's pretty hard to take seriously. PHIL BROWN

Bill Cunningham New York

Genre: Documentary
Director: Richard Press

Now in his 80s, the enigmatic photographer Bill Cunningham still gets paid to snap shots of ordinary New Yorkers for the New York Times' On the Street Page. Richard Press' documentary seeks to showcase his process and investigate how such a modest, unassuming man could come to wield such massive influence. Cunningham's reticence keeps the film from being a fully rounded portrait, but it's still fascinating. ADAM NAYMAN

La Rafle

Genre: Drama
Director: Rose Bosch
Stars: Jean Reno, Melanie Laurent, Gad Elmaleh

A stirring and emotionally devastating portrayal of the round up and deportation of Parisian Jews during the Nazi occupation of France in The Second World War. Writer/director Rose Bosh tells the story primarily through the eyes of the children, making the events seem all the more surreal and reprehensible. La Rafle is an undeniably painful viewing experience, but ultimately a rewarding one. PHIL BROWN

Lost Journey

Genre: Drama
Director: Ant Horasanli
Stars: Reza Sholeh, Pedram Ziaei

A bit like Goin' Down the Road told from an Iranian perspective, Lost Journey focuses on naïve 19-year-old Pedram who, after moving to Toronto, tragically discovers a world of drugs and overnight raves. Although visually stunning, the energy is hampered by flat dialogue and an uneven script. STEVE GOW

STOP HAIR LOSS

BIO-FEN PLUS™ is a natural health product used in the treatment of hereditary androgenic alopecia (AGA) in adults (male or female pattern baldness.) It contains scientifically calculated proportions of extracts of fenugreek seeds, saw palmetto berries and flax lignans. Each are known to possess an inhibitor of the enzyme responsible for causing male or female pattern baldness. It also contains a mixture of B vitamins, folate and biotin to help metabolize these herbal extracts so that they are more bio-available, and to support the growth of strong and healthy hair.

How does BIO-FEN PLUS™ work?

Specific compounds within the herbal extracts inhibit the 5-alpha-reductase (and therefore reduce DHT) to prevent or slow down the rate of hair loss. This process is the principle by which the prescription drugs such as Propecia (finasteride) work. However, BIO-FEN PLUS™ also contains additional compounds which remove excess cholesterol and testosterone – the building blocks of DHT.

BIO-FEN PLUS™ also contains vitamins to increase blood flow to the small capillaries that feed the hair roots, to deliver the active herbal compounds and remove waste. Therefore, BIO-FEN PLUS™ provides a natural, safer alternative to expensive drugs, and/or expensive & painful hair transplants. As with the prescription alternatives, results vary from person to person, and no one product will work for everyone.

How long must I use BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

BIO-FEN PLUS™ capsules are usually effective at stopping hair loss within the first two months. However, since healthy hair grows only about 1 cm each month, it may take up to three months before you notice that hair growth is increased or further hair loss is stopped.

Anyone experiencing new growth will see it within four to six months. Once results become apparent, some users are able to reduce their BIO-FEN PLUS™ supplement dose to one capsule every second or every third day. Some clients will continue to take BIO-FEN PLUS™ daily. Once you stop completely, however, your hair growth pattern will slowly go back to the point where you started.

How safe is BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

The ingredient combination in BIO-FEN PLUS™ is generally safe for most adults. However, the following cautions are advised:

Folic acid: Consult a health care practitioner if you are uncertain whether or not you are taking adequate vitamin B12, as folate supplementation can mask a Vitamin B12 deficiency.

Vitamin B3: Consult a health care practitioner prior to use if you have impaired liver function.

Vitamin B6: Consult a health care practitioner prior to use if you are taking levodopa.

What is the quality of BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

BIO-FEN PLUS™ is manufactured in Canada according to a quality assurance program called Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP). This ensures that the ingredients are tested for their level of quality, potency & purity, prior to production and again prior to sale.

See our website to locate your nearest Health Food Store or Pharmacy that offers BIO-FEN PLUS™ and other quality products from Hair Grow Technology.

If you have any questions or comments about our products that target hair loss and support the growth of strong, healthy hair, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Calendar Girls runs until May 28 at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, 260 King Street West

METRO TORONTO

The passing of a spouse is enough to send anyone's life spinning.

But after she lost her husband to leukemia in 1998, did Angela Baker ever imagine that she'd find herself in Toronto promoting a popular play based around her life? "Not in a million years," she says. "It's incredible."

Baker is, of course, one of the 11 Calendar Girls, a group of middle-aged English women who posed nude for a charity calendar to raise money for leukemia lymphoma research. Their story was first turned into a film, starring Helen Mirren, then the aforementioned play, which Mirvish Productions has brought to Toronto.

Sitting in the company's rehearsal space on King Street, Baker, along with Lynda Logan, Rosalyn Fawcett and Christine Clancy, each clad in all black with a yellow flower pinned to their right side, recount their long strange trip.

The group's original calendar first appeared in April of 1999. By August, Baker was fielding phone calls from Hollywood. "How they get your number I have no idea," she says. "It seemed like a bizarre situation."

That situation was further complicated by a schism within the group, with five of the women wanting to go with English comedian and filmmaker Victoria Wood. Ultimately though, the final decision fell to Baker and her family. "We had a glass of champagne and we toasted what we'd done so far and the other girls retired." The group settled on an independent English company, insisting on script approval, that the film be shot in England with English actors and a high royalty rate for their charity. Four and a half years later, the film made its premiere.

"As soon as they walked in I think we realized that they knew why we'd done the calendar.

The play, penned by the film's screenwriter Tim Firth, followed in 2009, and has since been staged in numerous countries including Brazil, Russia, Greece and Turkey. All four women say they're not sure what draws people to their story, particularly when translated into another language. "The English humour is quite different" says Logan.

But Baker thinks it's the relationships between the characters that bond audiences around the world. "It's the friendship and the group of women who get to help a friend. A lot of people have gone through what I've gone through."

"It's just wonderful that we have this kind of camaraderie."

CATWALKING

Move boldly into sprinter

That's a term some fashion people have started using to refer to those cold weather pieces mixed in with all the summery items hitting stores right now. It sounds oxymoronic, but in the fashion world, it's perfectly logical.

KENYA HUNT
METRO WORLD NEWS

Fur stoles for spring? Sheer skirts for the dead of winter?

These days, it all makes perfect sense, with fashion designers paying little attention to the season for which they're creating clothing.

Yes, we all still need warm coats when it's cold out and something light and airy to wear in the heat.

But in the past year, some of those old rules like, say, thou shalt only wear sandals in summer, have changed.

From a business perspective, fashion houses are finally taking a look at the timing in which their clothes hit stores and the fact that women don't necessarily want to have to wait three to four months to be able to wear their spring or winter scores.

"The fact of the matter is, the weather is still very cold in most countries by the time the spring collections hit. It's a slightly old-fashioned mentality to be so controlled by the season," Zowie Broach, one-half of the London-based design duo Boudicca says of the phenomenon some editors have taken to calling "sprinter." She created fur-collared wool coats for her spring collection because she knew that "there are women in Russia who will buy these in March.

But even if the customer is in Las Vegas, she might want to wear that coat over a beautiful chiffon dress on a chilly night."

Prada's hugely popular spring collection featured outsize brightly colored fur stoles that at first glance seemed like an odd choice for the season, but ended up being one of the most coveted pieces of the year with shoppers snapping them up as soon as they hit stores in late February.

A cold-weather perfect jacket from Burberry Prorsum's spring/summer collection.

Meanwhile, Burberry Prorsum showed quilted leather jackets that could work just as well in January as April.

"Right now, it's less about 'spring' or 'summer' and more that it's a 'new season.' When it's cold out, you want a new, great coat. It's as simple as that," Broach says.

"Women want to buy and wear things immediately. The hunter/gatherer isn't storing anymore," she adds.

Global e-commerce sites like Net-a-Porter further stoke the winds of change.

"As an international business, seasonless dressing is very relevant to us," says Holli Rogers, buying director at Net-a-Porter.

"There is nothing more frustrating than not being able to find something when you need it most. Many of the brands we stock now offer multiple collections that include pre, cruise and high summer.

"With this increased frequency of new arrivals throughout the year, we can offer more choice to our customer wherever she may be, from New York to Australia to Moscow," she adds.

SOLID PERFUMES

A blast of spray perfume can overwhelm in the heat. Replace it with a solid version for summer, which can actually be a bit lighter due to the fact that it allows you to control how much you wear — and how strong you smell. L'Occitane's Rose 4 Reines has a light floral touch that won't necessarily encourage the mosquitoes to come calling. Meanwhile Le Labo and Anthropologie have collaborated to create a sweet and delicate summery mix of mandarin and musk called Orange Discrete. For something a bit headier to be worn into the night, try Diptyque's enchanting Eau Duelle with rich notes of vanilla and frankincense.

Straight talk

Jenny Randhawa and Karen Manhas, Blo Blow Dry Bar's Vancouver Franchise Partners, blomedry.com
"Straight hair is to curly hair what Beyonce is to Sasha Fierce"

Step 1 Apply a dime-sized amount of Moroccan Oil through towel-dried hair and a root lifter around the crown root area.

Step 2 Finger dry hair upside down pulling on roots where you want lift.

Step 3 Place hair in three sections and blow dry with a large round brush for maximum smoothness away from your face to create lift. Remember: start from the back and work your way to the front and create tension with your round brush to maximize volume. Also, the key to a smooth mane is to make sure your hair is blown out completely dry and end with a blast of cold air.

step 4 Part dry hair into three sections and run ceramic flatiron through mid-shaft to ends. This retains volume. Add shine spray.

Curl control

Peter Ciardulli, Curly Hair Expert & Owner of Calia Hair Design, CaliaHair.com
"Curly hair is to straight hair what cashmere is to silk"

Step 1 Cleanse the hair with an anti-frizz shampoo. Next use a moisture-rich conditioner which will help smoothen the cuticle, detangle and improve manageability. Curly hair should be cleansed 1-2 times a week and be conditioned every time you wet down or wash the hair as needed.

Step 2 Comb through hair with fingers or very large tooth comb. This reduces any tangles that may occur during the styling process.

Step 3 Apply a generous amount of curl-focused styling product. Calia Texture Curl Cream is a fast drying hair cream that calms down unruly or frizzy hair with soft and pliable results. Apply in 2-3 applications so you get more of an even distribution of product throughout hair then repeat Step 2.

Step 4 For extra lift on the root pinch the hair and clip it with a roller clip. This will give extra support on the top of the head and root area. Never manipulate the hair while in the drying stage, either air or blow dry by diffusing. This means no scrunching, shaking or rubbing the hair while it is in the drying stages. By doing this you're not allowing the curl to form and take shape.

Step 5 Once the hair is dry then you can finger through the hair and scrunch it to loosen the curl. At this point your hair is set and will not frizz! You can add a finishing crème like Calia Fibre Optics - a cream based pomade. This will define and separate the curls for more definition.

Hidden costs of home buying

Before you buy your first home, consider these 10 forgotten costs to include in your budget

ALISON GRIFFITHS
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
ALISONGRIFFITHS.CA

When Marcelle, 29, and Janeen, 31, bought their first home — a new condo near funky Whyte Avenue in Edmonton — they were determined not to join the house-poor crowd. So they saved up a 25 per cent downpayment, said no to upgrades and bought used furnishings.

But six months later they were in trouble. They hadn't anticipated a host of expenses that tipped their purchase from affordable to "it hurts!" Consider these 10 frequently forgotten costs when you do your budget.

Interest adjustments
This covers any gap between closing date and first mortgage payment. Avoid it by lining up the closing date and first payment to be exactly a month apart.

Mortgage insurance
This is typically required by lenders if your downpayment is 20 per cent or less (to a minimum of five per cent).

Home inspection
The average is around $100 an hour, though some home inspectors charge by house size.

Survey (certificate of location)
If there isn't a current one available, plan on spending from $750 to $1,500.

Legal costs
These vary but average $1,500 to $2,500.

Property appraisal
This may be required by your lender, though some include it as part of the mortgage package. Otherwise plan on $150 to $300.

Home insurance
This is an often-overlooked item when calculating monthly payments. Get at least two estimates.

Vendor reimbursements
This is necessary for items like taxes and fuel, which the vendor paid in advance.

Land transfer tax
Loathed by home buyers, this tax may be levied in your area. Ask about reductions for first-time buyers.

Condo costs
These can include a parking spot, in-advance monthly condo fees, PST\HST on appliances, occupancy fees, tax on upgrades and warranty enrolment fees.

A little prep in advance of purchase ensures you won't be hit by sticker shock at closing.

Variable or fixed

- A variable rate will change with interest rates while a fixed rate is, well, fixed for a specified term.
- Economist Moishe Milevsky's research indicates that a variable rate saves money 90 per cent of the time, as much as 50 per cent of the interest paid over the life of the mortgage.
- But if certainty means you'll sleep at night, fixed may be more suitable, even though you'll pay for the security.

New or resale — choose what's right for you

There are advantages either way — it just depends on what fits your lifestyle

ALEX NEWMAN
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Shopping for your first house can be fun — especially seeing what's new in home decor — but with all the choice, making a decision can be a challenge. A good place to start is either new or resale.

"Whether it's your first time buying or your 10th, deciding depends on personal preference and location," says Elton Ash, regional executive vice president of ReMax Canada West in Kelowna, B.C.

It's hard to deny the appeal of a brand new home with all the latest in kitchens, baths, fixtures, he says, and there's a warranty that backs the building, foundation, finishes, etc.

A resale home's biggest appeal is its history — being in an established area, solidly appreciating value, nearby retail, schools, green space, plus a sense of neighbourhood.

But location is a multi-faceted issue, Ash adds. New homes are usually found in subdivisions, so there's commuting if you work downtown. That adds to the time and money bottom line, so that needs to be weighed with the house price. Ash has noticed an increased desire for suburbs with good rapid transit connections. The new suburban home also offers lots of home — both in size and lifestyle extras — for the money.

OLD OR NEW

Don't forget closing costs

It's important to ask about all the various costs of a new or resale home. Resale homes have set closing dates and costs: the house is already built, and closing costs are roughly 1.5 per cent of the purchase price. New homes can be a different story, says Rodney Litigio, a Toronto mortgage consultant with buyingblock.com: What you see in the sales brochure, for example, may not be what you get, so "when you sign a new purchase agreement, always try to make the sales brochure part of the agreement."

The same goes for closing costs. New homes are subject to additional municipal levies, so closing can cost up to 4 per cent of the purchase price. Litigio says you can negotiate to cap how much you'll pay of those closing levies, with the developer picking up the rest.

▶ The top renovation expenditures are kitchens and baths.

Weighing in on upgrades

When buying a new home, should you go with the standard package or invest in upgrades? Should you buy from the builder or do it yourself?

DUNCAN MCALLISTER
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Home renovation is a $50-billion industry in Canada, and most builders will offer a variety of upgrade options ranging from appliances and bathroom fixtures to floor coverings, countertops, doors and decks.

The trick is to know how much to spend. "The top two renovation expenditures are the same no matter where you go — that's kitchens and baths," says Peter Simpson, president of the Greater Vancouver Home Builders' Association.

As far as upgrades are concerned, the sky is the limit. "We're finding that over the past few years the number of products available has increased significantly so the choices are enormous. If you want a handmade nickel clawfoot tub and you've got an extra $60,000 kicking around, you can have that," says Simpson.

Ben Young, COO of Ramar Homes in Halifax, says the tendency used to be larger homes, but potential buyers are now looking more for interior features, or the "fit and finish" as he calls it. "They're paying attention to things like their kitchens. Granite countertops are becoming much more popular."

From an investment perspective, any improvements you make will add to the resale value of the home, but only up to a point. A good rule of thumb is to keep a five per cent cap on your upgrades if you want that money back from your investment.

The options offered by builders may vary and some offer limited choices because they're at a certain price point. You may prefer to add your own improvements after the fact. Maybe you'd like to upgrade the kitchen floor to a nicer tile, for example.

But Simpson warns that any work that you or another contractor performs after you've moved in is not covered by the warranty on the house.

IN HOT WATER

Legal Matters

JEFFREY COWAN
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

Q: I recently purchased a resale property with an existing hot water heater. In the offer of Agreement of Purchase and Sale, my real estate agent included the hot water heater, which may be a rental — "if assumable." After closing the transaction, I contacted the power supplier and they indicated that they owned the water heater and that there was $3,000 outstanding on the purchase agreement — and that it had to be paid immediately otherwise they would remove the apparatus. What should I do?

A: Your problem is all too common. Most people who own houses (as opposed to condos) rent their water heater from the local authority, which means that the standard clause in an Agreement of Purchase and Sale is fine.

Each owner has a small charge on their monthly supply contract that they often don't even blink at (around $10). However, more and more frequently, especially in newer homes, the water heater is on a rent-to-buy program (also which the vendor is unaware of) and these contracts are not transferable.

So, the new owner is forced to pay for the heater or suffer the consequences. Of course, they would have a cause of action against the former owners, but once the monies have changed hands and the vendor is off with their proceeds, it is next to impossible to get reimbursement without a law suit.

This is a serious and growing problem that purchasers, real estate agents and vendors must be aware of. One way or another, the owner of these heaters will get their money. Let's hope you are not the one left on the hook.

Fall in love, carefully

If you follow your head as well as your heart, your dream home will also be your best investment

KELLY PUTTER
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

First-time homebuyers should behave like investors because that's how they'll save money and ultimately live a happier life, says Don Campbell, a Vancouver real estate expert.

"If you prefer not to save money, then think like a homebuyer," says Campbell, an investor who analyzes and writes about the Canadian real estate industry.

And while it's tough to approach your first home with your brain instead of your heart, Campbell recommends looking for certain criteria in the area you like that will encourage you to make a wise decision.

"You fall in love with a house in a neighbourhood that has a future and not a past," he says. "Buy in an area where the property values will go up."

Buying close to a train or LRT station is a good idea because those properties are predicted to rise in value 15 per cent more than similar properties that aren't near a station, he says.

It's also smart to work your mortgage like an investor, says Campbell. So on a $300,000 variable-rate mortgage, choose to pay back the higher monthly payment of a five-year locked-in mortgage.

Yes, the payment is more than you're required to pay, but 100 per cent of the extra payment goes off the principal. After five years, you'll have paid the same total as a locked-in mortgage, but with this method a lot more comes off your principal and you've paid a lot less in interest payments.

Determining a few key factors before hitting the bricks is a good idea for first-time homebuyers, says Rob Faulkner, president of the Nova Scotia Association of Realtors.

Faulkner says it is vital that buyers determine what they can afford, choose a few locations that work for their lifestyle and buy a home based on lifestyle and the ability to maintain it.

OK, here's what we did. We checked out ten 1 bedroom suites at different downtown condos. We averaged the size and price and guess what? A 2 bedroom, 2 bath, 937 sq. ft. suite at The Station is bigger and less expensive than a 1 bedroom, 1 bath, 598 sq. ft. condo downtown. THAT'S LIKE GETTING A SECOND BEDROOM FREE.
Here's what's cool too! At The Station Condos you're right on the subway with just a 20 minute ride to downtown. Plus, you'll enjoy an amazing array of amenities at our spectacular Studio Club.

Get down with down payments

It's best to minimize your debt load by maximizing your down payment ◐ Otherwise you pay an insurance premium on your mortgage ◐ RRSPs can help you fund a home purchase

ASTRID VAN DEN BROEK
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

What exactly is a down payment on a new home?

"Any lender wants you to have some of your money going into a home purchase alongside the lender's money. That's basically the function of a down payment," says Geoff Parkin, president of the Vancouver-based Mortgage Brokers Association of B.C.

And, as with most payment programs, the more you put down the less you owe later. The federal law states that anytime you borrow more than 80 per cent of the value of a home, you have to be insured against default by one of Canada's three mortgage insurance companies.

"So we add an insurance premium to the home buyer's mortgage. So for that $400,000 home where you're putting $20,000 down, you might have another $8,000 added onto your mortgage as an insurance premium."

ISTOCK

▶ The more you put down, the less you owe later.

The premiums are calculated by how much your down payment involves starting at 80 to 85 per cent (of the total cost), then 85 to 90 per cent and then 90 to 95 per cent. "Obviously as you get higher, you've put less down on your down payment, the premiums go up," says Parkin.

So how to calculate what you need to put down on that $500,000 three-bedroom home you're in love with?

"Take the cost and multiply it by five per cent, and that tells you what your minimum down payment is," says Donna Mullen, a broker/owner with Your Mortgage Store in Wasaga Beach, Ont.

In this case, you would put down $25,000. But as Mullen reminds us, that five per cent is only the minimum — even though there are programs available offering cash-back incentives to pay off personal debt.

That allows you to free up more money for the down payment and lets you virtually go through 100 per cent financing for your first home, keeping in mind you'll pay the price in higher insurance premiums for at least the first five years of your mortgage.

"But five per cent is where you have to start from. If you have more to put down, that's awesome because the more you put down, your mortgage insurance premium goes down and you save money."

To keep that down payment in mind, Parkin suggests crunching numbers before you start house hunting. "Always get preapproved for a mortgage before you go shopping — go through the math to see what you can afford, especially if the market is active," he says.

How to find the right realtor

The real estate market traditionally heats up each spring, and for first-time homebuyers, finding the right realtor is an important step to help you on your search. Here's a checklist on how to find the right one for you.

- Get recommendations from family and friends.
- Cruise neighbourhoods you like, and write down the names of realtors on the For Sale signs.
- Visit open houses to meet realtors face-to-face.
- Ask for references, and check to see if any of the realtor's references are relatives.
- Ask how long the realtor has been in business, and if he or she has up-to-date training.
- The home will require additional work, such as home inspections, renovations, legal advice or mortgage advice, and the realtor should be able to give you a list of options for each of these services.
- You want a person who is assertive, but also someone you can work well with. Be sure you feel comfortable with the person.
- Make sure your realtor is someone who will be available by phone and email, and takes time to go over paperwork with you.

"Once you have some names, interview two or three and choose the one you feel would best fit as your partner throughout the process," suggests Rob Faulkner, president of the Nova Scotia Association of Realtors.

A good realtor may stay with you if you move homes, so trust and a solid relationship are important.

- While it's best to minimize your debt load by using your own savings for a down payment, other options include a financial gift from a family member, combining your cash with money from an existing line of credit or tapping into your RRSPs.
- The Homebuyer Mortgage Program lets you take up to $20,000 out of RRSPs without paying tax on it, if it's for the purchase of your first home. "It's for first-time homebuyers only," says Parkin. "That can then be repaid over 15 years in equal instalments and there are no tax consequences."
- That's on top of your amortization, or the number of years it takes you to pay off your mortgage — changes to the federal law in March dropped the length of amortization from 35 years to 30 years.

MOUNTAIN VIEWS COME WITH A HEFTY PRICE TAG

Rooftop Surfing

STEPHEN DUPUIS
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

I was in Vancouver last week checking out the high-rise condo development scene in advance of a pending housing study tour by Toronto condo developers, designers and marketers.

The selection of Vancouver as the tour destination was no accident, considering that it is the second most active high-rise market in North America and the fourth most active housing market overall (the GTA is tops on both counts).

If there is one project in particular that drew us to Vancouver, it's The Village, the 1,200-unit community built for the athletes competing in the 2010 Winter Olympics and now on the market.

With the Pan-Am Games set for Toronto in 2015, it's worth learning from Vancouver's experience, especially since we need over 2,000 units here (yes, the Pan-Am Games are bigger than the Winter Olympics).

Another factor that drew us to Vancouver is the number of sustainability features built into their condos, which our builders are always keen to study. I was surprised at just how much geothermal heating/cooling is tapped there, not to mention the ubiquitous green roofs. We even saw a net-zero energy consuming building at The Village, which is the ultimate expression of green building.

A fourth reason to check out Vancouver is their allowance of six storey wood frame construction, something Ontario is considering, and which our association is encouraging as a mid-rise building alternative. Our builders are always looking for ways to reduce construction costs and very anxious to talk to the Vancouver builders about this option.

There's one area where Vancouver does come first, and that's in price. Those mountain views come with a hefty price tag, but that's one idea we'll do our best to leave behind.

Preparing the backyard for spring

Time to bring out the gardening tools and return to green pastures

DIY IDEAS

Backyard season is almost here and in anticipation of sunny skies and warm weather, DIY Network Canada's Turf War (Mondays at 9 p.m. ET/PT) has a few tips on how to get your yard in tip-top shape.

Walk the Perimeter

Spring showers have washed away the snow, but chances are they've also exposed a messy lawn.

Prior to rolling out the lawnmower, make sure to pick up any sticks, stones or other debris that has made their way into your yard.

While wearing protective gloves, pull up any dead plants or weeds in the garden to loosen the soil and make room for new sprouts. Walk around the house to assess the foundation of the house. Check for cracks and pools of water that threaten to leak into the basement.

Check and Clean

Take an inventory of your garden tools and check hoes, trowels, rakes and shovels for cracks and splintering.

Rubbing linseed oil on wooden tool handles can prevent splintering, which in turn diminishes the chance of personal injury.

Consider replacing tools that are on their last leg so that garden projects won't be interrupted by a suddenly broken tool.

Snowy winter weather also leaves grime and fungi on the surface of the patio deck.

Prior to dragging out the patio furniture, give the deck a proper wash.

Make your own cleaning formula by mixing a cup of laundry detergent with four litres of hot water.

Pour the liquid onto the patio and use a bristled brush to get out the tough stains. Rinse off the entire deck with water and allow it to dry completely.

Prune Away

Some garden plants, such as rose bushes and hydrangeas, require pruning in order to remain healthy and produce new blooms. Pruning is most successful when it's done while the blooms are still dormant.

Using pruning shears, make a clean, angled cut a quarter inch above an outward-facing bud.

Continue this technique across the entire plant. As well, cut back any dead stems. The more you prune, the more room there will be for new blooms.

Don't be afraid to slice that tree

LEE REICH/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Chopping and grafting may look brutal but it can result in beautiful fruit trees.

Visitors to my garden this time of year are often astonished to see me lopping the tops off some of my trees.

No, I'm not the Henry VIII of horticulture, chopping the head off any tree that no longer meets my fancy. OK, I am actually lopping the head off any tree that doesn't meet my fancy.

I part ways with Ol' Henry, though, because first, lopping the head off a tree does not kill it, and second, I graft on a new head. A few years after this seemingly brutal operation, the tree looks as chipper as ever.

And it has a head that I like better — or else off it comes again.

I do this type of grafting, called topworking, mostly on my apple trees, but it could be applied to many other kinds of fruit or ornamental trees.

For instance, if you don't like the growth habit of your red maple or the leaf shape of your Japanese maple, you can just lop back the head and change it. Same goes for the flower colour of a crab apple or flowering cherry.

Drying

▶ If your timing is right, and trunk and scions are in good contact, the only remaining threat to success is from the cut ends drying out. Avoid this by thoroughly coating all cut surfaces, including the tips of the scions, with some sort of pruning paint or grafting wax. My favourite is a gooey black stuff called "Treekote."

GATHER YOUR STEMS

Before you can topwork any tree, you have to have stems, called scions, of the variety to which you want to change the plant.

You might get scions from a neighbour's or friend's tree that you have admired.

I often get scions for grafting mailed to me from enthusiasts elsewhere across our fruited plain, or from government institutions. Healthy portions of last year's growth, each cut into pieces a foot or so long, are ideal to become scions. They can be collected anytime in winter or early spring, as long as stems are showing no signs of growth and temperatures are above freezing.

A FEW CUTS AND YOU'RE FINISHED

The ideal time for topworking is when buds on the trunk are just beginning to grow; the scions are still under refrigeration in their winter sleep.

This way, the scion will have time to knit to the lopped-back trunk and hook up its plumbing before its buds expand into thirsty new shoots.

The actual grafting operation is simple, and there are a few ways to go about it. Cleft grafting, for example, is practised by gardeners for thousands of years and best done on trunks 2.5 to 10 centimetres across.

Wedge grafting and bark grafting are among other methods of topworking, described in such books as The Grafter's Handbook by R. J. Garner (Sterling Publishing, 1993) and Plant Propagation: Principles and Practices by H. Hartmann, D. Kester, F. Davies and R. Geneve (Prentice-Hall, 2010). THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Royal decor frenzy

Karl Lohnes offers tips for helping you decorate to celebrate Prince William and Kate's big day

DESIGN CENTRE

KARL LOHNES
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

It's only one week away from the Royal wedding and the world has all eyes focused on Britain.

It's only natural that home decorating fanatics cash in and do a little royal decorating to celebrate this historical soiree.

Forget about the stodgy gold-rimmed teapots and dollar bin tea towels, here's a list of fabulous British-inspired decorating accessories that are sure to turn your house into a royal celebration of its own.

Its always nice to have a reminder of the Royal wedding. I'm not quite sure what happened to the porcelain platter of Charles and Diana I purchased at their wedding.

Most likely ended up in a yard sale many moons ago.

This time around I might buy something trendy that I'll be proud enough to display.

The Big Ben Clock from Urban Barn ($80) is 4-feet tall and would look fabulous hung on the small wall in the foyer.

Never to be late and always in style!

I'm thinking a large printed wallpaper would look great hung inside my walk-in closet for impact.

The illusion of having many crowns just might start a few royal rumours amongst those who visit.

In terms of entertaining, I'm thinking of waking up early and having a royal brunch at the house. Serving things like Cream of Earl Grey Tea from David's Tea in my new Keep Calm mugs from Keepcalmandcarryon.ca and serving up a custom English Garden Wedding ice cream cake from Baskin Robbins will add a punch of British whimsy to the occasion.

Am I that crazy about the Royals? I am considering painting my small den a vibrant purple and Royal Throne P5149-63 from Para Paints is on the top of my list!

Teamed with some dark brown wood furniture, a charcoal grey upholstered sofa and a funky Union Jack wall plaque from Urban Outfitters, and I'll achieve a room handsome enough to attract any Prince.

Tron film inspires experiments at furniture show

LUCA BRUNO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ People take a look at a Jacuzzi tub designed by Italian designer Marco Piva, inspired by the film Tron: Legacy.

Safehouse furnishings, to be sure, are a niche rarely considered by home decorators.

No market is too slim, however, for the folks at DuPont Corian and Disney, which teamed up to commission a high-tech and futuristic hideout inspired by the film Tron Legacy and presented this month at the Milan Furniture Show.

The furnishings — in keeping with the safehouse inhabited by Jeff Bridges' video game developer in the 2010 film — are gleaming white. For consistency, the conceptualized safehouse includes the sleek, elongated wall-unit bookshelf seen in the movie, but the bedroom, entertainment area, outdoor patio, bath and kitchen are all new.

Italian designer Ergian Alberg, a trained architect who designed the kitchen with partner Laura Aquili, said their goal was to explore how matter shapes space, and how space drives the movement of matter. The kitchen features an undulating island with a six-burner stove capped by an arching hood that seems more sculpture than appliance, and a built-in sink.

It is accented by rectangles of glowing blue light that unify the island with an illuminated floor grid, arched lamp over the kitchen table and matching cabinets.

"Every line seems to start and then make a path around the kitchen. This is for us a good interpretation of what happens in the movie, when you have the chases on the motorbikes," Alberg said.

Like all the safehouse furnishings, the kitchen is made of DuPont's Corian, a nonporous material touted for its hygienic qualities, which can be formed into virtually any shape.

While the pieces are at the moment just in concept, Alberg said the kitchen could easily be realized. He ventured it could cost somewhere around $142,100 (100,000 euros).

Alberg was not alone among the designers playing with scale at the Milan Furniture Show, which ended Sunday. The six-day event, which marked its 50th year, spilled from the capacious 530,000-square-metre convention centre into the city's galleries, boutiques and open spaces.

DINNER EXPRESS

EMILY RICHARDS
FOOD@METRONEWS.CA

Easter dinner isn't meant to be a rushed affair. And neither should the meat you serve. But it doesn't mean you have to work particularly hard at it. This flavourful, slowly roasted leg of lamb from Sarah Raven's cookbook, Fresh From the Garden is simple but elegant.

Preparation:

1. In very large resealable plastic bag, combine wine, garlic, cumin, coriander, olive oil, salt and pepper. Mix well. Add the leg of lamb, close the bag and toss well to cover. Stand the bag upright (or double bag) in a large bowl and refrigerate for 24 to 48 hours, turning the bag every few hours to coat the meat.

2. In large roasting pan, arrange carrots, onions, leeks and garlic in an even layer. Place the leg of lamb over the vegetables, then pour the marinade in the bag over everything. Roast in 300 F (140 C) for 4 1/2 hours. Remove the pan from the oven and transfer lamb to a serving platter. Cover the lamb with foil, then a layer of kitchen towels. Let rest for 30 minutes.

3. Gravy: Meanwhile, heat stock in saucepan over low. Use a slotted spoon to discard vegetables from the roasting pan. Let the liquid in the pan rest for several minutes, then spoon off any visible fat. Set the roasting pan over 1 or 2 burners and heat over medium, scraping the bottom with a wooden spoon to loosen any stuck bits. Sprinkle in the flour and cook, stirring constantly, for another 1 to 2 minutes.

4. Slowly pour the hot stock into the roasting pan, stirring until it becomes a smooth gravy. Stir in the port and jelly, then simmer for 5 minutes. Season with salt and pepper Slice the lamb and serve with the gravy.

Artichoke & Asparagus Salad

While the Easter dinner meat is an affair not meant to be rushed, doesn't the side dishes can't be made quickly. Here is an easy Artichoke and Asparagus Salad. It not only celebrates Easter but also the spring season.

Preparation:

1. Bring large pot of water to boil. Set a large bowl of ice water next to the stove.

2. Blanch asparagus in the boiling water for about 4 minutes or until bright green and just tender. Transfer to the ice water to cool and stop the cooking. Drain well.

3. In large bowl, whisk together oil, vinegar, thyme, Dijon mustard, lemon rind and juice, salt and pepper. Gently toss the drained asparagus spears and the artichoke hearts in the dressing.

4. Serve sprinkled with the feta cheese.

Sip & save the planet

Wineries are teaming up with environmental organizations to raise funds for eco-friendly causes

Sip a pinot, save the planet? That's the thinking behind wineries teaming up with environmental organizations to raise funds for trees, seas and land.

One of the latest is Clean Coast wines, the brainchild of California winemaker Susie Selby.

The owner of Selby Winery created the wines, available online, and in Mississippi and Louisiana, with the goal of raising awareness of the Gulf Coast recovery effort.

"I spend a lot of time in Louisiana. It's just a place that's near and dear to my heart," Selby said. After the 2010 oil spill she decided she wanted to do something to help the area on a long-term basis, so she came up with Clean Coast wines.

The four wines — pinot noir, chardonnay, cabernet sauvignon and merlot — carry labels decorated with marine creatures. From every bottle sold online (cleancoastwines.com) $4 is donated to the Greater New Orleans Community Foundation.

For Selby, raising money is also a way to cut through the slightly intimidating image that can be associated with wine.

"It's an honour to give back through wine," she said, "because people still enjoy the food and wine experience, but are also able to make a difference."

Other wineries are branching out in different eco-related directions.

For example, Root 1, produced in Chile, is a long-standing partner of Global ReLeaf, a branch of American Forests. By the end of 2011, winery officials estimate Root 1 and Global ReLeaf will have planted more than 40,000 trees in forest restoration projects around the world.

Canucks say they'll be fine

- 'They are going to respond really well (Thursday),' says coach Vigneault
- Vancouver did lose four games in a row this season in November

▶ Chicago's Bryan Bickell scores on Vancouver goalie Roberto Luongo Tuesday night.

The sooner the Chicago Blackhawks are finished, the better it will be for the Vancouver Canucks.

Vancouver has pushed the Blackhawks to the brink of elimination by taking a 3-1 lead in their NHL Western Conference quarterfinal series.

The Canucks want to give the Hawks that final shove Thursday night (CBC, 7 p.m. ET) to extinguish any flickering hopes the defending Stanley Cup champions have of climbing back into the best-of-seven series.

"You need to have that mentality that you have to finish them off," Canuck forward Daniel Sedin said Wednesday after practice.

"If there's a Game 6 or a Game 7, it's a different series. You are happy being up 3-1. We have home ice and this is a rink we love to play in. We will be ready."

The Canucks blew a chance to sweep the Hawks out of the playoffs when Chicago pounded them 7-2 in Tuesday night's Game 4. It was the first time in the series the Hawks showed flashes of the team that has eliminated Vancouver from the playoffs the last two seasons.

Defenceman Kevin Bieksa said the lopsided loss will only be a problem if the Canucks dwell on it.

"It's essential we put it behind us and move forward," said Bieksa.

"If we come out with a different mindset and play the way we did in the first three games, we should be fine." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pacquiao motivated for Mosley

Freddie Roach is not a man given to hyperbole. When Manny Pacquiao's trainer says the pound-for-pound boxing champion is having his best training camp, Sugar Shane Mosley had better pay attention.

Pacquiao is in the final stages of preparation in Hollywood for his bout with Mosley at the MGM Grand Garden in Las Vegas on May 7, and the Filipino congressman hasn't been so singularly focused on boxing for quite a while.

147 Pacquiao is already near the bout's 147-pound limit and his sparring session have exceeded 12 rounds.

"He hasn't lost a step. He's working at a higher pace than ever," Roach said Wednesday in his Wild Card Gym. "He's not in the same condition as the last fight. He's in better condition than I've ever seen. He isn't going to get caught underestimating anybody." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Halpern set to return for Habs

Jeff Halpern was skating on the wing at the Montreal Canadiens practice Wednesday, but where they may need him most is in the faceoff circle.

The 35-year-old looks ready to return after missing the final four games of the regular season and the first three of the playoffs with an undisclosed injury.

Coach Jacques Martin, true to form, would not confirm that Halpern will dress for Game 4 Thursday night at the Bell Centre.

Montreal leads the best-of-seven series 2-1, but is coming off a 4-2 loss at home Monday night.

"It's a call we'll make (Thursday)," said Martin. "He's an experienced player who played a major role in our penalty killing. He's a smart player who brings a lot of leadership to the dressing room."

Halpern says he has fully recovered.

"I feel good, we'll see what the coaches decide," he said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Shaq out for Game 3

Shaquille O'Neal will miss his third straight playoff game for the Boston Celtics with a right calf injury when they meet the New York Knicks Friday night.

Coach Doc Rivers made the announcement Wednesday. He says he doesn't know if O'Neal will travel to New York but, if he does, he will probably play in Sunday's fourth game. The Celtics are up 2-0 in the series. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dodgers taken over by MLB

Major League Baseball is taking the extraordinary step of assuming control of the Los Angeles Dodgers, a team increasingly paralyzed by the bitter divorce of owners Frank and Jamie McCourt.

Once among baseball's glamour franchises, the Dodgers have been consumed by infighting since Jamie McCourt filed for divorce after 30 years of marriage in October 2009. It came one week after her husband fired her as the team's chief executive.

Frank McCourt accused Jamie of having an affair with her bodyguard-driver and performing poorly at work.

"I have taken this action because of my deep concerns regarding the finances and operations of the Dodgers and to protect the best interests of the club," commissioner Bud Selig said Wednesday in a statement.

Selig's move might be seen by some as a precedent should the New York Mets have additional financial problems. With owners Fred Wilpon and Saul Katz under pressure from a lawsuit tied to the Bernard Madoff swindle, the Mets borrowed $25 million last year from Major League Baseball.

Yankees fall out of No. 1 spot in British study ◗ Ten NBA franchises and eight MLB teams cracked top 30

Barcelona and Real Madrid have overtaken the New York Yankees as the best-paid global sports teams, according to a British study.

The review published Wednesday showed annual average pay during the 2009-10 season was $7.9 million US at Barcelona and $7.4 million at Real Madrid.

The Yankees are paying their players an average of $6.8 million this season. The team last year topped the review, which is compiled by sportingintelligence.com and is being published by ESPN The Magazine.

The NBA's Los Angeles Lakers and Orlando Magic occupy the fourth and fifth spots.

The Toronto Raptors were the top-ranked Canadian franchise at No. 46 with an average annual pay of $3.92 million.

Chelsea, Manchester City, Manchester United, Liverpool and Arsenal also are among the 30 best-paid teams, making the Premier League the richest soccer league in the world.

The report looked at average first-team pay in 14 of the world's leading sports leagues, including Aussie Rules Football and cricket's Indian Premier League.

The Vancouver Canucks ($2.64 million) ranked 88th, ahead of the Ottawa Senators ($2.63 million) at No. 89, Montreal Canadiens ($2.52 million) at No. 93, Calgary Flames ($2.48 million) at No. 96, Toronto Maple Leafs ($2.27 million) at No. 118, Toronto Blue Jays ($2.02 million) at No. 139 and Edmonton Oilers ($1.90 million) at No. 150.

▶ Miami's Chris Bosh is guarded by Philadelphia's Elton Brand during Game 1 of their first-round series last Saturday.

Bosh ready for boos

'In Game 3, I think their will is at stake here,' former Raptor says of 76ers

Chris Bosh can't wait to see Philadelphia at its best.

No, not the 76ers.

Miami already survived Philadelphia's top effort in Game 1 and held on for the victory.

Bosh wants to absorb the atmosphere at a hostile court like in Philly — from the rowdy fans in the rare full house dressed in matching T-shirts.

"I'm sure they'll be ready. They have a reputation, so I expect them to really own up to it," Bosh said. "We've prepared ourselves."

"We just have to go in there with thick skin ... and let the opposing boos really, really motivate us."

CHRIS BOSH ON PLAYING GAME 3 IN HOSTILE PHILADELPHIA

Oh, boy. Just what the Heat need is more motivation.

The Heat survived the 76ers in Game 1 and destroyed them in Game 2.

LeBron James is healthy. So is Bosh. Dwyane Wade says he is "good to go" after dealing with migraine symptoms.

So unless the trio all come down with some sort of mystery ailment that puts them on the bench for Game 3 Thursday, the Sixers are still in serious trouble. Home court or not.

"We've bounced back, we've shown resiliency," Sixers coach Doug Collins said. "I think for our guys, if they could just come out and see the ball in the basket, it would be such a lift for us."

The Sixers are viewed as little more than a speed bump on Miami's way to the Eastern Conference semifinals, but the Philly fans are some of the toughest. No game is harder to win than Game 3.

"We're trying to win both, but Game 3 is the most important one," James said.
